Postmen See Strike As Report Attacked

MEMBERS VOTE OVER WEEKEND

IWA Power Fight Blamed For Split on Settlement

By AB KENT

The coast forest industry's 26,000 workers begin voting this weekend on whether to accept a contract settlement package hammered out in six weeks of negotiation and passed by bargainers minutes before a strike deadline Wednesday.

Ballots are being prepared and among the first International Woodworkers of America members to go to the poll will be those of the Victoria local which has called a meeting for Sunday.

The 1,800 member local will hold a pre-vote rally in the Victoria Curling Club rink at 1 p.m.

Local vice-president Joe Fowler, in issuing the notice, said balloting will be done only at this meeting, not on job-sites.

Meanwhile factions within the IWA are apparently lining up — one side opposed to settlement on the terms worked out with Forest Industrial Relations, the other endorsing the memorandum of agreement as the best that could be worked out under the circumstances.

The conflict is a reappearance of the internal power struggle that occurred from years ago when regional president Jack Moore was challenged by Vancouver local president Syd Thompson.

Thompson and Duncan local president Weldon Jubenville were against recommending the settlement that would grant woodworkers a 36-cents-an-hour wage increase over two years.

Ten union representatives meeting with FIR on the contract were divided evenly until Moore cast the tie-breaking vote on signing the memorandum.

Moore called the proposal the "best or second best" agreement the industry had arrived at. A 40-cent wage increase was gained by woodworkers two years ago.

John Billings, president of FIR, said the agreement was "very costly." He drew attention to the fact it had come without government intervention.

'BEST PACKAGE'

"This settlement provides for a generous wage increase and one of the best vacation packages ever offered by any major employer group in Canada," he said.

"The industry, the union and the employees will now have to work together to absorb this very costly package."

It was on the issue of annual holidays and pay that the union split. The proposal calls for five weeks after 25 years' employment, four weeks after 15 and three weeks after four years, with pay calculated on gross earnings.

The 114 forest industry employees had refused to alter their position on holiday periods, but agreed to base holiday pay on gross rather than basic earnings.

WILDCATS ENDED

Spokesmen for FIR and the IWA said that as far as was known all wildcat walkouts that plagued a few operations as negotiations drew up to a climax had ended—with the possible exception of the northern tip of Vancouver Island or remote coastal mainland camps.

The IWA said ballots will be returnable July 31 for compiling. Results of the vote, which will be held at various times in the various locals, should be known Aug. 1.

Plenty of time is allowed for the ballotting to take place because of the remote areas to be covered.

Walkout 'Likely' Next Week

(Times News Services)

Montreal union officials, preparing for a nationwide postal strike July 18, said today a conciliation board report dealing with the postal dispute contains no cash settlement proposals.

Marcel Perreault, Montreal local president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said he personally has not yet seen the report, but that he understands it deals, primarily with working conditions and not with higher salaries.

"I don't believe the report will change anything about the date of the strike," he said.

The conciliation report has been given to union leaders but is not scheduled to be made public until Friday.

Other postal union spokesmen across the country backed up the Montreal view that a strike was near-certain.

In Vancouver, union official Jim McCall said "we fully expect to go on strike next week."

He termed the conciliation report unacceptable,

MEANINGLESS

Without recommendations regarding salary scales the report is meaningless, he said.

In Victoria, strike headquarters have been established and picket duty lists prepared, according to Gerald Kenny, president of the Victoria local.

Mr. Kenny added, however, that he had not yet been informed of contents of the conciliation report and until it is made public comments by union leaders in Vancouver and Montreal are "a bit irresponsible."

DO SOMETHING

Prime Minister Trudeau said in Ottawa Wednesday night "something will have to be done" by the federal government if a postal strike is called.

He did not elaborate.

The prime minister indicated the government did not plan to intervene unless a strike is called. An emergency session to deal with a postal strike could be held anytime after July 25, the date election writs are returnable.

If the strike is called, it would be the second one in three years.

Montreal union leaders told 1,000 workers at a noisy meeting Wednesday night the strike could take place legally seven days after the three-man conciliation board's report was handed to the government Wednesday.

MIRACLE NEEDED

"We are headed for a strike and I think that only a miracle can stop it," said Mr. Perreault.

However, union spokesmen said the strike could be delayed if the Council of Postal Union Workers, in charge of arrangements for a walkout by 24,000 postal employees across Canada, so decides.

If the strike takes place, it will stop the flow of all mail except for that originating from social welfare agencies. Union officials said arrangements would be made to have the welfare mail distributed.

Mr. Perreaut called on the workers to continue their planned strike no matter what pressures are put on them and regardless of injunctions, special legislation or even imprisonment.

POWERS FOR JUNTA

Greece Cuts Democracy

PAPADOPOULOS
. . . council in command

ATHENS (CP) — Greece's army-backed government published today a draft constitution that would drastically slash the powers of the king and Parliament.

The regime announced a referendum on the draft will be held Sept. 29 instead of Sept, 1, as originally planned.

Premier George Papadopoulos told a news conference the vote was postponed at the request of many groups and citizens.

Under current conditions political analysts assume the consituation will be approved by the estimated 5,000,000 Greeks eligble to vote on it. But there was no firm indication of how soon after the referendum the constitution would take effect and elections would be held.

The proposed new charter is a sweeping revision of a previous draft drawn up by a panel of jurists and other legal experts.

There is no provision in the draft giving the military any power over governments. Ostensibly the country would return to civilian control under the constitution. But then, as now, the real power would presumably be with the soldiers-turned-civilians who run the military and the country.

POWERS REDUCED

Any decison taken by a king would need approval by a national council of top leaders. A constitutional court would be empowered to dissolve any political party judged unacceptable for the nation's welfare.

Greece's previous constitution was discarded by the ruling junta after the military coup d'etat April 21, 1967.

Publication of the final draft was postponed several times in the last few weeks because of serious discord within the junta on the monarchy's future role.

The military rulers have not forgiven King Constantine because he did not support their coup and then tried to overthrow their regime with a counter-coup last December. When it failed, the royal family fled to Rome.

CAN'T NAME PREMIERS

The draft constitution removes the king's power to appoint and dismiss premiers, a source of frequent clashes between the royal house and the political parties in the past.

Instead, the political party that wins a majority in parliament would name the premier, and the members of his cabinet would not be drawn from parliament.

Parliament would be virtually powerless. Reduced to 150 deputies from 300 before the coup, it would be limited to expressing judgment on minor legislation.

In an apparent concession to members of the regime that wanted the monarch to retain some rights, the constitution allows him to keep the title of commander-in-chief of the armed forces.

Russians Leaving Czechs Announce

PRAGUE (AP)—Soviet troop units, whose continued presence after June manoeuvres ended caused alarm throughout Czechoslovakia, will be withdrawn Saturday, the Czechoslovak government announced today.

The troops—estimated to number 3,000 to 5,000—had stayed on while the official Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda was charging for the first time that "counter-revolutionary" forces were active in the reform regime here. Soviet troops had smashed what the Kremlin called a "counter-revolution" in Hungary in 1956.

The government announcement said the troops would be gradually transferred "to the places of their permanent stationing outside this country."

At the same time, defence ministry spokesman Lt.-Col. Frantisek Kudrna was quoted as saying the Soviet withdrawal had been delayed after anti-Soviet leaflets had been circulated in Czechoslovakia which "aroused concern on the part of the Soviets."

"The Soviet troops wanted to leave, but the development of the internal political situation in this country—I mean the impact of the leaflets—delayed the departure which has become complicated," Kudrna stated in an interview with a Slovak daily. The interview apparently was given before the government learned of the Warsaw pact command's decision.

The Canadian union already holds certifcation for the plant, but a vote was called for by the international union after signing up some members there.

Britain Pulling Out From Singapore Base

LONDON (AP) — Britain announced today it will hand over the major part of its naval base at Singapore to the island nation by the end of the year. Britain will keep the part of the base area where naval stores and administrative buildings are located.

A new white paper on defence policy, following an announcement in January of a plan to close gradually bases east of Suez by 1971, said redeployment would make Britain one of the most powerful military forces in Europe.

The Labor government also reiterated it will reinforce its garrison in Hong Kong, the crown colony on China's doorstep.

The white paper said 130 acres of the Singapore base, complete with dockyards, drydocks and other repair and storage installations will be released so the Singapore government can begin converting the facilities for commercial use.

This was the first announcement that Singapore would use the facilities commercially.

The transfer of the base this year is part of a program to help ease the adverse economic impact of the extensive reduction of British military forces east of Suez by 1971.

The British earlier this year announced they were assigning to NATO one entire division, a parachute brigade and a special air service regiment. These home-based units can be called upon by NATO for service in emergency. They are supported by RAF squadrons and a naval force.

The white paper listed the following new British contributions to NATO:

—From 1969 a squadron of Shackleton long-range maritime-reconnaissance aircraft will be transferred to Malta.

—From 1970 a guided missile destroyer will be added to Britain's frigate force in the Mediterranean. A commando ship will also be stationed there.

—From 1970 Rapier air defence units of the RAF will be switched to NATO. From 1971 Phantom-strike-planes bought from the United States will be at the disposal of the alliance.

The white paper stressed Britain's resolve to preserve its ability to rush to the help of any colony or Commonwealth partner any place in the world in case of military need.

U.S. CONGRESS GIVEN TRUDEAU 'HATE' TALES

WASHINGTON (AP)—Accusations about Prime Minister Trudeau's past, similar to those denounced as hate literature by all political parties during the Canadian election campaign, have been entered into the congressional record.

Representative John R. Rarick of Louisiana, saying Trudeau's election has "caused many Americans to inquire into his background," filed an article by the Canadian Intelligence Service of Flesherton, Ont., as publisher in the South African Observer. Also entered was a recent broadcast by Rev. S. J. Lyons, later reproduced in a number of publications.

Rarick, a right-wing Southern Democrat, said in introducing this "interesting background documentation" that the Trudeau victory led many Americans to "ponder what can be expected from the new leadership of our neighbor to the north."

TORRENTIAL RAINSTORM

6 Lost in U.K. Floods

LONDON (AP) — Torrential rain caused sudden floods through western and central England today. Six persons were dead or missing.

Troops, helicopters and army amphibious vehicles rescued hundreds as the downpour lightened to a drizzle.

More rain than normally falls in a month fell in a day, swelling rivers over their banks and sending up to six feet of water through low-lying towns. Officials said the storms were the worst in memory.

At least 39 major roads were closed. Trains to Bristol, Liverpool, Manchester and Birmingham were cancelled. The West Country was virtually cut off from the rest of England.

The pounding rain eased to a drizzle at dawn in most places, and the sun broke through in parts of the West Country, but more rain was predicted for later.

London escaped major flooding, but scores of motorists abandoned flooded cars Wednesday night and basements in some parts of the city were awash.

The worst hit areas were Devon and the Cornish Aiviera resorts regions in the southwest, crowded with stranded vacationers.

CBC CONSOLATION PRIZE FOR OAK BAY

Quiz Kings Off to Singapore

By DON VIPOND

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation announced today an expense-paid trip to Singapore for the four boys from Oak Bay high school who last week emerged national champions on the Reach for the Top television quiz show.

Robert W. McGall, provincial director for the CBC, said in Vancouver that arrangements for the winning team's prize had been underway for several weeks but were not completed in time to be announced when the final rounds were taped last week.

The Oak Bay team will be offered the trip, probably this fall, although time and duration have not been decided. The prize will be sponsored by the CBC with the assistance of the youth travel and exchange program of the Department of the Secretary of State in Ottawa.

The student team of Chris Odgers, Bruce Izard, Robert McDougall and Jim Dempsey beat nine other teams on their way first to the provincial and then the national championship.

A furore developed over the weekend with word that the champs would not be included in a similar Canada-U.K. competition next month.

Initially the CBC said travel costs would be too high and this brought subsidy offers from Premier Bennett and Canadian Pacific Airlines.

The network then explained plans for the pilot project were too far advanced. It said finalists had been told earlier that the international competition had no connection with the Reach for the Top series.

Reg Jessop, CBC information officer in Vancouver, said today he did not know whether the prize being offered Oak Bay included team coach Glen Atkinson and spare team member John Duder.

Mr. McGall announced the Oak Bay team's visit to Singapore will be filmed for later viewing on television.

While in Singapore the CBC will hold discussions with Singapore broadcasting and education officials with a view to organizing an exchange of school teams to compete in an international student quiz series.

'Police Guide' Warning From Police

"I have good reason to gelieve that many merchants in the city have already received or will be receiving invoices billing them for an advertisement in a publication known as the Police Safety Guide," Chief Gregory said.

"I have one invoice in my hand right now for $19.50 brought in by a local businessman who has not ordered advertising. All businessmen should be advised that unless they have specifically ordered advertising in the publication they are under no obligation to pay the bills being submitted."

Chief Gregory added that the publication, which gives a Post Office Box 4483, Edmonton, Alberta, address, has no connection with the Victoria Police Department.

"Not only is it not connected with us, it does not have our support in any way," the chief said.

No Evidence Of Diphtheria Found Here

The disease of diphtheria has been contained in Vancouver despite the vist to Victoria of a Vancouver boy under strict quarantine as a carrier of diphtheria baccili.

The Greater Victoria metropolitan board of health has taken throat swabs from 54 people with completely negative laboratory results, senior metro health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread reports.

"These contacts of the boy came forward voluntarily and to date the disease has not spread to this area from Vancouver," he said today.

A group of 30-40 people vistied a Victoria home where the boy was visitng. The nine-year old came in contact with most of the guests who were subsequently asked to report to the health authorites.

"If any carrier had been found a strict quarantine would have been enforced," said Dr. Whitbread.

Plywood Union, FIR Spokesmen Meeting Tonight

Steps to end a three-day strike of 230 Victoria Plywood mill workers will be taken tonight.

Spokesman for the employees and representatives of Forest Industrial Relations arranged to talk over the reasons for the walkout.

There have been no discussions with management of the company, and none will be present tonight, the International Woodworkers of America local has been told.

Issues involved are foremen doing some work claimed by employees, and use of non-union labor by two millsite contracters.

World Beauties Bid for Crown

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Miss Universe contestants from France and from The Congo are roommates here because they both speak French.

"She's coffee and I'm milk," said Elisabeth Cadren of Paris, touching first the skin of Elisabeth Tavares and then her own arm.

Many of the other international beauty queens at the 18th Miss Universe Pageant are saying Miss Tavares could be the first of her race to win the title when Miss Universe 1968 is chosen Saturday night.

Miss Australia, 21-year-old Lauren Jones of New South Wales, said: "She can win. I'd like to see her win. She's very attractive. When we first arrived, Miss Congo seemed very wary of us."

Miss Congo heard the translation and laughed.

"I would be happy to win," said Miss Tavares, "but I don't think I could win.

Miss Congo's blonde roommate and main booster, Miss France, 22, said, "She's beautiful and I see no reason why she shouldn't be Miss Universe."

Fixed Annual Wage Pulp Union's Goal

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers said Wednesday that a guaranteed annual wage, negotiated in Eastern Canada, should become a pattern for British Columbia.

Vice-president Pat O'Neal said the union negotiated the guaranteed annual wage, key issue in current pulp negotiations in B.C., in a new contract for 5,000 workers in Quebec and Nova Scotia.

"I am hopeful now that the Eastern Canadian mills have acceded to our request for a guaranteed annual wage, the B.C. pulp and paper companies, who enjoy a far greater efficiency and a much higher profit ratio, will accede to similar requests of our local union in B.C."

There was no immediate comment from industry officials.

The pulp negotiations are continuing between the International union and the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Association under conciliation officer Jack Laffling. The International union is seeking a 12 per cent increase.

The Independent Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, also involved in the negotiations, is seeking a minimum guarantee of 144 hours pay in a four-week period and a 35-cent increase on the base rate of $2.85 an hour.

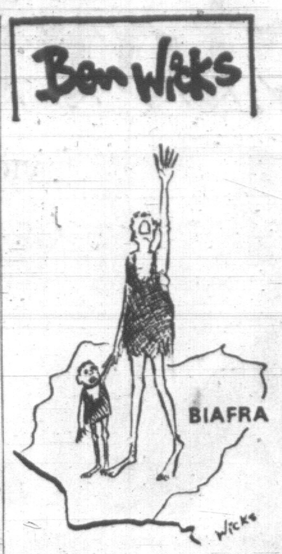
Mr. Perreault said the strike would not end "until everything has been settled in a fair and equitable way."

He called on Prime Minister Trudeau to "have more sense of responsibility and a little less kissing."

Maurice Briers, president of the Montreal local of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada, said conciliation report "doesn't contain much good—nothing more than what has been agreed upon during the negotiations."

In answer to questions raised by union members, Mr. Perreault said the date could be changed from July 18 but that it would probably not be set later than July 20.



Police Seek Gas Cap Owners

Caps off to the Oak Bay police.

Two juveniles who apparently eluded capture during the theft of 42 car gasoline tank caps in June were apprehended when they took the 43rd.

Now the police face the problem of returning the caps to close the case — and the gas tanks. Twenty-three are still in their hands.

Unilingualism Gets Jeers and Cheers

MONTREAL (CP) — The Roman Catholic school board of suburban St. Leonard, which voted June 27 to convert its bilingual schools to French-language unilingualism, Wednesday brought back limited English-language instruction.

The five-member board unanimously adopted a resolution calling for one-hour daily English lessons for elementary school pupils from the fifth grade up. The rest of the pupils' education will be in French.

The resolution was moved by board chairman Jacques Deschenes, a member of the Mouvement pour l'Integration Scolaire, which supported unilingual schools as a means of integrating new Canadians into French-Canadian society.

The meeting was marked by cheers and jeers from board members and an audience of about 50.

Meanwhile, board members John Papa and Leo Perusse, who oppose unilingualism, protested against the manner in which the June 27 meeting was conducted.

Both refused to endorse the minutes of the meeting because "our right to speak and even our counter-proposal against unilingualism was refused."

Biafrans Face Extermination

By JOHN O'CALLAGHAN
The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — U Thant's appeal Wednesday to Biafran leaders to co-operate more fully in getting relief to the starving population of Biafra will fall on deaf ears in Umuahai, the secessionist former eastern Nigeria's present capital.

Biafra's leader, Lt.-Co. Odumegwu Ojukwu, is making political and diplomatic capital from the pitiful state of those suffering in Biafra.

But Ojukwu and every individual I spoke to over the last 10 days in Biafra, believes that this impedning tragedy is relatively small beside the catastrophe that would take place if federal Nigerian troops penetrate the overcrowded patch of land which is all that remains of Biafra.

Two million people, many of them children, are now said to be far along the road to death by malnutrition, but Ojukwu thinks that 10 million Ibos would be slaughtered if Nigeria pursues complete military victory.

Biafrans point to the programs organized in the recent past by northern Nigerians against Ibos—most spectacularly in 1966 when many thousands were killed. And they doubt that Lt.-Col. Yakubu Gowen, the federal Nigerian leader, could control forward troops made bitter by a long war, with victory in sight and old tribal scores to settle.

Whether or not millions of people would be killed, that belief continues to motivate actions in Biafra, where the residents intend to leave their homes and take to the bush.

One successful Biafran magnate told me on Sunday that he had already secured a place in the middle of the jungle and that he intended to go there if things become sticky in Aba.

He will fight from the jungle, and in the end is ready to die rather than give up. This is a man who would be listened to with respect in most international boardrooms; he could still buy a plane and fly out.

Down the social scale from this businessman tribal fears begin to bite deeper and make withdrawal into the jungle, and subsequent guerrilla war, more certain.

It is possible to rule out a corridor for relief from Lagos on practical grounds—smashed roads, blown bridges, the rainy season, and simple distance—600 miles or more.

More potent in Biafra is the fear of poison. A few amateurish efforts at poisoning smuggled food supplies have been discovered by both Biafran government and mission hospital scientists. Most Biafrans believe food would be poisoned, and poisoning is a traditional way of getting rid of enemies.

Ojukwu Firm; 'Pawns' Starve

By ALFRED FRIENDLY
The Washington Post

LONDON — The starving people in Biafra are being used as political pawns, it is charged here by British sources most knowledgeable about current diplomatic moves to bring a halt to the Nigerian civil war.

These sources, influential but not identifiable, declare that "the callousness" of Lt. Col. Odumegwu Ojukwu, head of the secessionist Biafran regime, "beggars description."

A sesne of outrage at what is seen as Ojukwu's breaching of his word in diplomatic negotiations, refusal to make concessions toward peace and heartless last-ditch strategy pervades informed British opinion.

WILLING TO CONCEDE

Rigid some months ago, he is seen now as willing to make extensive concessions to guarantee a high degree of self-government to the IBO peoples, dominant in the break-away state.

The Real Answer

DESPITE THE MULTITUDE OF points raised in the Oak Bay byelection campaign there is only one real issue: is the Legislature to retain the strength of its Liberal opposition members who can bring the necessary expert criticism to bear on the government's actions and policies, or is Mr. Bennett's back row of supporters to be augmented by still one more yes-voting voice?

With the NDP candidate presumably out of the running, the contest is between Mr. Allan Cox, the Liberal candidate, and Mr. Peter Pollen, who is entered as a Social Credit nominee. While Mr. Pollen has conducted a well advertised campaign, there is little that he could add to a government which already dominates the Legislature numerically—which, in fact, has already entered that stage of decline which inevitably affects long-term regimes.

Two of the government's chief ministers recently left the cabinet; the control of the province's affairs is falling more and more into the hands of a small core of multi-portfolio ministers; there is a growing arrogance which is typical of administrations in this phase of the aging process and which ultimately will lead to disillusionment and rejection by the public.

Mr. Cox would serve as a three-dimensional asset in the Legislature. Although representing Oak Bay, he could be an active spokesman for Greater Victoria in a way in which Social Credit members for Victoria city riding have never been; he would provide immediate debating strength for the very vital job of examining and questioning the actions of an increasingly complacent governmental majority; and he would continue the nucleus of Liberal opposition members who at a not far distant date will be able to offer an alternative to the waning Social Credit government—an alternative that is not socialist.

Mr. Bennett would dearly like to make permanent a provincial situation in which his party was the only alternative to the NDP, for he could then use the fear of socialism as a recurring argument for keeping his government in power. But Mr. Bennett's rightist-minded, frequently leftist-acting administration is not the sole answer for voters seeking non-Socialist representation. Canadian politics have never split into the stark, unavoidable right-versus-left choice into which he would like to manoeuvre this province.

The federal political scene amply demonstrates the viability of a three-party parliamentary system, and the many Canadians who prefer the benefits of a middle-of-the-road administration spoke clearly in the federal elections. The Liberal Party offers that choice in our provincial politics, and it is that choice which Mr. Cox represents in Oak Bay.

Cutting Alberta's Tap?

THE DIRECTOR OF ALBERTA'S fish and wildlife branch, Mr. Stuart Smith, has raised an important point in his complaint that British Columbia's diversion of northern waters for the Portage Dam has injured the economy of his province's northland and threatens its ecology. He says that the change of flow of several rivers has left Lake Athabasca and Lake Claire with levels much below normal. This, he believes, could seriously injure fishing and trapping on which 2,500 Indians depend for their livelihood.

Here again is an example of the conflicts that so frequently accompany multiple use of resources—conflicts usually resolved by determining the most advantageous use with the least possible interference with other acceptable interests. In this case, however, the normal formula becomes unbalanced because, if Mr. Smith is correct, the injury is inflicted by one province's authority on another province. A little late to assist the neighboring province is the proposal advanced by D. A. Munro, director of the Canadian Wildlife Services, who suggests that the B.C. dam project be studied by all provinces to prevent similar situations arising elsewhere in the future.

Of course such studies should be made. But Canadians will wonder, if the case is as Mr. Smith states it, why they weren't carried out before Portage Dam was created. In our current pe-occupation with the triumphs of science and engineering, are we to remain blind to the adverse residual effects of those triumphs until they loom up like a fist on the nose?

Those Chilling Human Errors

THE REVELATION THIS WEEK of human errors which blocked transmission to USS Liberty of orders to move out of the fighting zone during the Middle East war makes chilling reading. The message directing the vessel to leave the danger area went by error to the Philippines instead of the Mediterranean, and was later relayed back to Fort Meade in the United States, where it was filed. A third human mistake prevented reception of another warning to the Liberty from the Sixth Fleet Commander in the Mediterranean.

The Liberty was attacked by the Israelis in an assault for which apologies have been made. But the apologies do not breathe life again into 34 sailors who were killed or bring much comfort to 75 others who were injured. Here is another instance in which human error led to tragedy which might have been avoided. It is frightening to recognize once again that the human potential for error in military arrangements could conceivably nudge the switch for universal disaster.

The conventional answer to that possibility is the statement that it could never happen, that adequate safeguards prevent such a catastrophe. The communications foul-up in the Liberty case revives doubts that any precautions can be foolproof. More basic safeguards against nuclear war by accident are needed.

Rolling Down to Maui

ALTHOUGH A TRANS-PACIFIC yacht race is necessarily a remote form of spectator sport, the current Victoria-to-Maui contest is developing definite aspects of excitement and tension. A Victoria entry, Potlatch, skippered by Wally Meakes, moved from last to third position in a thrilling two-day spurt, while the Vancouver sloop, Mary Bower, which led the fleet at an early stage, has dropped back to the rear position. With the boats around the half-way point in the 2,300-mile event and the crews called on for the utmost in seamanship and navigation to sail through or around the high-pressure area of doldrums now being encountered, the race still promises many changes of fortune. The usual formula for corrected time further complicates predictions of the winner. There is a real battle going on out there and it is a pity that we cannot know more of it.

ASSESSING DOUGLAS

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

A Success Transcending Failure

Hutchison

THOSE who welcome or lament the end of T. C. Douglas' parliamentary life are quite wrong if they think it was a failure. In fact, it was a remarkable success. The old CCF under the late J. S. Woodsworth and M. J. Coldwell, and the New Democratic Party under Mr. Douglas have been, in some ways, the most successful movement in the history of national politics. Over and over again the voters rejected the doctrine of socialism but, stone by stone, it was built into the structure of our society. Today the social system, whatever name you give it, is much closer to the ideals of the Regina Manifesto than it is to the original theories of the old-line parties. And despite all protests to the contrary we are still moving in the general direction of Woodsworth, Coldwell and Douglas while apparently spurning them.

Of course these men moved, too. Mr. Woodsworth, the early prophet and perhaps the finest spirit ever known in our Parliament, understood human misery and yearned to cure it but he had only ideals, not workable plans, and his ideal of peace in 1939 forced him to retire, honored by everyone.

Mr. Coldwell, an abler parliamentarian, who would have made an excellent prime minister, was a complete pragmatist like Pierre Elliott Trudeau and at heart a rather old-fashioned country gentleman. His great contribution was to educate the CCF out of the impossible notions of its youth and into more practical courses. Mr. Douglas is an entirely different type of man whose career has been ended by three curious mistakes.

First Mistake

The first, not of his making, was to label and imprison the CCF, under a new name, as the organ of a special group, the labor unions. No national party (as Mr. Douglas and Mr. Coldwell probably suspected from the start) could be built on that narrow, class-conscious foundation.

The second mistake was to strike for office and to pretend that office was within reach when the true purpose of a left-wing party was to act as a social critic, a goad and a pioneer of future reform. As such a useful element in the chemistry of politics the New Democratic Party could be tolerated and, within limits, encouraged.

Mr. Douglas went beyond those limits. When he boasted recently that he might lead the next government, or at least the official opposition, he may have believed it in his moments of elation. But no one else did and the nation, thus alerted, made sure that socialism was held down to its proper size in Parliament.

The third mistake, and a natural one at the time, was Mr. Douglas' sincere belief that the old-line parties, sick onto death, would unite in some kind of right-wing coalition and leave the NDP in control of the left as a real alternative government. Unfortunately for his long-range strategy and fortunately for the nation, the old-line parties recovered their health, found two competent leaders and, marching down the centre, pushed Mr. Douglas to the barren outer rim of the road.

Move to Centre Blocked

Throughout this experience both Mr. Coldwell and Mr. Douglas (neither being socialists by the CCF definition) tried vainly to push their party into the centre. They were frustrated on the one hand, by their stubborn ideologists of the left who preferred defeat to compromise and, on the other hand, by labor union leaders who denied some of the most obvious facts of economics.

Toward the end Mr. Douglas, desperately straddling and confusing these facts, was driven to the ultimate absurdity of denouncing inflation while demanding unlimited wage increases, plus higher expenditures without higher taxes. The public saw through that paradox with no serious eyestrain.

Still, the NDP was succeeding in its larger purposes, not directly, openly or even intelligently but, as it were, by osmosis. Some of its success had been foreseen long ago by Mackenzie King who told me more than once that the only risk to his Liberal empire came from the left, not the right.

He perceived no danger in the Conservative party but he deeply feared the CCF and tried to swallow it by inviting Mr. Coldwell into his cabinet. Failing in this offer, he moved Liberalism gently but rapidly leftwards, occupied just enough socialist ground to perpetuate his regime and rationalized a rough manoeuvre of politics by persuading himself that it merely implemented the dreams of his boyhood.

At any rate, our society began its peaceful but profound revolution under King and the revolution, in the broad sense of a many-sided word, was socialistic. Whether it would have occurred anyway, without the CCF and the NDP, is a question forever unanswerable. But certainly the socialist party helped to force the pace while the old parties continually stole its ideas and pretended that they were only sound Liberalism or Conservatism.

In the result we do not have a pure socialist system as the theorists of socialism had hoped and expected. We do not have a pure capitalist system, either. We have, as always in any free society, a queer, inconsistent but workable compromise which socialists and capitalists can interpret as they please and which moves on, disregarding both extremes and ignoring all labels.

There must always be room in the changing market place of ideas for the extremists and hot gospelers whom society digests at leisure. And in the nation's chronicle, when contemporary passions have cooled, there will always be a place of honor and gratitude for men like Woodsworth, Coldwell and Douglas who failed in federal electoral politics but, with all their mistakes and broken hopes, succeeded abundantly where success really matters.

The Constitution Gives Wallace a Blackjack

Purser

MOST of the political activity in the United States, and most of the writing about it, is focussed sharply on three contests: between Vice-President Hubert Humphrey and Sen. Eugene McCarthy; between Mr. Richard Nixon and Gov. Nelson Rockefeller; and the November showdown between the two victors. The third-party (American Independent Party) campaign by former Gov. George Wallace of Alabama is still treated largely as a sideshow. It isn't. It is no longer a joke, but rather a deadly serious threat to the political stability and future well-being of the United States and, by extension, of its place in the world.

Among academic and such other circles as can set themselves apart from the hurly-burly of politics these days, the Wallace threat is drawing attention to the long-standing peculiarity of the American system that permits such a man to become a threat in the first place. The call for reform is being sounded, too late for action to head off the immediate danger. If reform does come next year or soon after, it will only be because of the lesson in political shambles that Mr. Wallace may be teaching the nation between next November and January.

In brief, the situation is this: Mr. Wallace may well be able to prevent the immediate election of either the Democratic or Republican candidate on November 5, and by so doing enable himself to dictate the terms of resolving the ensuing stalemate.

Mr. Wallace owes his chance for an unprecedented role in U.S. politics to a debate by the country's founding fathers 181 years ago. The constitution's drafters, in their effort to rule out dictatorship for all time by carefully separating the powers of different levels and branches of government, created the Electoral College system of presidential selection, which ironically brings Mr. Wallace closer to potential dictatorship than any man has been since Sen. Huey Long of Louisiana was assassinated 33 years ago.

No Direct Election

The 1787 Constitutional Convention ruled out direct election of the president, partly because the patrician founding fathers mistrusted the people's judgment — the idea of universal adult suffrage was scarcely born — and partly because communications of the day inhibited the rise of national candidates.

It adopted instead a system by which each state was to appoint a number of "electors" equal to that state's total representation in Congress.

The method of appointing electors was left to the legislature of each state, and it was assumed by the drafters that panels of distinguished citizens would be chosen, whether by limited suffrage ballot or otherwise. But it quickly developed that electors were being chosen for their appeal and for their faithfulness to political parties, which were not envisaged in the constitution.

Today, slates of electors are chosen by parties, usually at state conventions. The electors are generally unknown. Their names no longer appear on ballots. Only the names of the presidential candidates themselves appear. But today's voters, when they mark their ballots, are not actually voting for the president. They are voting for their state's slate of electors, each slate representing a party and pledged to that party's presidential candidate. If there are three candidates and the vote in a state is split 34-33-33, the entire slate backing the candidate with 34 per cent of the vote is elected.

Since the system operates on a winner-take-all basis within each state, election night score-keeping concentrates not on the total national popular vote but on the states won by each candidate, and on the size of their electoral votes. It is entirely possible for a candidate to win the presidency without a majority of the popular vote.

Two-Man Contest

As long as there are only two candidates, or as long as additional candidates either remain very minor indeed or fail to offset a decisive victory by a front-runner (such as President Johnson's over Sen. Barry Goldwater in 1964), the Electoral College system provides clear-cut victories despite any discrepancies between the popular and electoral votes. Any candidate who wins 270 of the 538 Electoral College votes wins, and that is that.

But to become winner, a presidential candidate must win that full majority of the entire college; a simple majority over other candidates in a three-way split is not enough. And that is why this year, with a close contest in prospect between the Democratic and Republican candidates, a third candidate with the support Mr. Wallace has so far managed to attract poses such a serious challenge.

Normally, the identity of the next president is known on election night and the vote of the Electoral College remains a mere formality. But this year, there is every chance that when the college meets — not together, but each elected slate separately in its own state capital — on December 16, the votes they will transmit sealed to Washington will not elect anyone president of the United States.

Present Danger

The danger is highlighted by opinion polls which show national support for Mr. Wallace running four times higher than that for the last southern racist to run an independent campaign,

Although an electoral map can be drawn showing Mr. Wallace winning the presidency himself with only one quarter of the total national vote, a Wallace victory is regarded as grossly unlikely. He is feared chiefly as a spoiler, and the prospective failure of anyone to win the presidency on November 5 calls forth visions of some intriguing scenarios.

If success attends an experiment the Dominion fisheries department is about to undertake, Shawnigan Lake will rival the best fishing waters on Vancouver Island.

E. G. Taylor, fisheries inspector, is building a series of fish ladders between Shawnigan Lake and Mill Bay by means of which fish will be able to get from the lake down to salt water and from the salt water into the lake.

The idea is not new by any means, but has been successfully worked elsewhere on the Island.

Not prejudiced against doctors

In an article entitled "We Thank God For The Doctors," published in your newspaper of June 22, remarks were attributed to Rev. Emma Smiley of the Victoria Truth Centre which may leave a wrong impression with your readers about Christian Science. We felt you would not want this to be.

Christian Scientists are not prejudiced against medical doctors. While we may not adhere to medical beliefs and practices, we have the utmost respect for the motives and philanthrophy of the earnest sincere medical practitioner.—Edward T. Roberts Bank

The story carried in the July 6 issue of Weekend Magazine on the new port at Roberts Bank in British Columbia was an excellent job by Mr. Philip Smith the writer.

However, we would like to point out that the Swan Wooster Engineering study mentioned by Mr. Smith in his story was commissioned by the National Harbours Board and all planning with regard to the Port was in the hands of NHB.

As a development since Mr. Smith prepared his story we wish to note that the initial phase of construction has already begun with the award of a contract for nearly $4 millions to a British Columbia consortium for the dredging and filling of the area. This first phase of construction will be completed in time for the handling of coal in late 1969.—Alan Duckett, Director, Public Relations Branch, NHB, Ottawa.

Those "Reasons of Economy"

Regarding the reason given by the CBC for not sending the winning team of "Reach for the Top" show to the U.K. being "for reasons of economy," I think the corporation should be asked how much it spent on securing an interview with a certain German lady some months ago. What must our young people think when they see so much money wasted on publicizing scandals and yet it is considered too expensive to send a fine team of young adults to compete in England. My how our moral standards and values have fallen!

With the premier of the province offering to pay a large sum towards the travel expenses surely the people of Victoria would be willing to assist in meeting the total amount required. The young men are worthy of the effort.—John Stevens, 2767 Musgrave.

How Much 'Integration' For Latin America?

(Mr. Gott has launched a 4,000-mile journey by land through six southern countries in Latin America. The first of his occasional reports on the trip follows.)

By RICHARD GOTT
The Manchester Guardian

SANTIAGO, Chile — I am embarking on a 4,000-mile journey by land through the six southern countries of Latin America.

No heroics, just a leisurely drive from capital to capital, planned partly with a view to seeing just how easy (or difficult) it is to move about in a continent which is supposed to be integrating itself and is due to be a common market by 1985.

From Santiago we shall drive over the Andes to Mendoza and then across the pampas to Buenos Aires. Taking the ferry over the River Plate to Montevideo we shall continue up through Uruguay and the southern part of Brazil. Then into Paraguay, past the famous Iguazu waterfalls, and across the river Parane to Puerto Stroessner, where Paraguay borders with Argentina and Brazil.

At Asuncian, capital of Paraguay, we plan to put the car on a boat that sails on the upper reaches of the river Paraguay, and with luck we shall disembark at Corumbo, near Brazil's border with Bolivia. Then across Bolivia, through Sanata Cruz and Cochabamba, to La Paz.

From La Paz it is but a brief downhill trip to the Chilean port of Arica. And from there nothing remains but the long journey across the great Atacama Desert, and finally back to Santiago.

For the apostles of integration, like Felipe Herrera, president of the Inter-American Development Bank, and for the rest of the international bureaucracy associated with the Organization of American States and the United Nations, integration has already come about. On their official passports they flip from one expensive airport to another by jet without a care in the world.

At the other end of the scale, the guerrillas who propose a Bolivarian unification of the continent hop across unguarded frontiers with almost equal ease.

But for the ordinary traveller who wants something between the marble of the airports and a mule trail this is a difficult continent.

First of all, it is almost impossible to enter Brazil by car. The Brazilians are so busy protecting their automobile industry that they prefer to keep out the car-driving tourist rather than risk the possibility that he might sell his car when he arrives in the country.

Given the Latin ability to organize a "fiddle" they are probably right to be so strict. The net result, however, is that I shall have to resort to some other fiddle if we are to continue to include Brazil on the itinerary.

Secondly, it is exceptionally difficult to leave Chile. The Chilean authorities are so anxious to ensure that no one evades their harsh tax laws that they do not issue exit visas until it can be proved that all outstanding taxes have been paid.

Not Easy

An excellent idea in theory—but the paying of one's taxes is no easy business, even with the best will in the world. In addition there is a whole series of other irritating restrictions which only serve to perplex the intending migrant.

Four of the six countries I shall be travelling through are under military rule. Only Uruguay and Chile still retain the forms of liberal democracy. In Uruguay this is relatively meaningless, and even in Chile a general has recently been given the post of minister of defence.

Argentina and Brazil have the new type of mild military dictatorship which is relatively kind to individuals, but clamps down on institutions which might constitute centres of serious opposition to the regime.

Paraguay boasts an old-fashioned dictator, Gen Alfredo Stroessner, who is internationally infamous, and Bolivia has an air force general Rene Barrientos Ortuno.

THE GALLUP POLL

It Wasn't the Women Who Swung Liberal Vote

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

What has five years done to the voting behavior of women and young people? Did Mr. Trudeau actually capture more votes in both these segments of the public than Mr. Pearson did in 1963?

Analysis of the institute's election figures shows that this year's increase for Liberals was just about the same among feminine voters (5%) as among the men (6%). There was no special swing to the Liberals among women.

On the other hand, the election this year captured a much higher proportion of the vote among young people—up 11% for the Liberals over five years ago. Within their age segment, more Canadians in their twenties voted for Mr. Trudeau than at any other age. Actually, among older men and women, 50 years and over, the Liberal vote actually dropped slightly.

Bees and Wasps Don't Have Much in Common

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL
Director, Provincial Museum

Dear Dr. Carl: Do wasps and bees fight together? Does the wasp make honey?— T. M.

Possibly because wasps and bees are somewhat similar in general appearance and in certain habits they are commonly confused by many people. Although they are classified in the same order of insects, namely the Hymenoptera they differ in many important respects. For example whereas bees feed primarily on nectar and pollen from flowers and build combs of wax for the storage of food, most wasps are almost omnivorous preying on a variety of insects and spiders and also feeding upon fruit; they build nests of chewed up plant fibre but do not store food.

Carl

It can be seen, then, that the two kinds of insects have different interests and therefore rarely come in contact with each other. While the bee is busy probing flowers for nectar the wasp, particularly the common yellow-jacket, is searching the air for flies and other soft-bodied victims or is busy slicing off flesh from dead fish or pulp from a half-ripe plum. Even if the two insects should accidentally meet head on they ignore each other; the honey bee is normally not the prey of the wasp and the wasp holds no interest as far as the bee is concerned.

Honey is produced by bees, particularly the so-called honey bees. Its basic ingredient is nectar, the watery, sweet-tasting liquid secreted by many kinds of flowers. This substance is sucked up by the bee, which has a tongue and mouth parts specially designed for this purpose and is stored temporarily in the insect's crop. When the bee returns to its hive it regurgitates this liquid which has now had added to it certain enzymes which transform it into honey.

Honey is composed of levulose and dextrose sugars dissolved in water containing some mineral matter, pollen and wax. The proportions vary with the season and of course with the type of flowers producing the nectar.

* * *

Honey is the principal source of food for all members of the bee colony. It may be used immediately or it may be stored in the comb to be drawn upon during the winter when no other food is available.

As already implied wasps do not make honey. They may feed upon nectar and other sweet stuffs such as jam or soft drinks on the picnic table but they do not turn these substances into honey because they do not need to store food for the winter. Only the fertile queens hibernate; all the other members of the wasp colony die off in the fall thus obviating the need of stockpiling food to tide over the species until spring.

Harold Wilson Faces Major Test of Power

By IVAN YATES

LONDON—Once again Britain's Labor government is in trouble. Another cabinet member, Ray Gunter, minister of power, has resigned.

But this time, unlike George Brown, who quit as foreign secretary three months ago, Mr. Gunter has hit out, both at Prime Minister Harold Wilson and his style of leadership.

Perhaps another man should lead the party into the next election, he has suggested.

There is nothing really surprising in these desertions. With a government as unpopular as Mr. Wilson's it would be surprising if there were not some rebellions and resignations.

No government since Balfour's in 1905 has suffered so many setbacks in byelections. Out of 20 byelections in the two and a quarter years since the last general election, the Labor party has defended 15 seats, and lost 11 of them.

Faced with this bleak record, MPs are bound to be fearing for their own seats when the next election comes, and their fears naturally turn their thoughts to the possibility that fresh leadership might improve their fortunes.

Mostly Policy

But the weakness of Mr. Gunter's position, as it was of Mr. Brown's is that neither man really disbelieves in the government's policy, and it is this policy much more than the prime minister's personality which has made the government unpopular.

Compulsory restraint on wages and salaries has been imposed three years running and, since the devaluation of sterling has been tightened further, has alienated the loyalties of Labor's traditional supporters — manual workers. Successful doses of taxation culminating in a record £900 million last March has embittered many middle-class voters.

On top of these sources of unpopularity, the government has disappointed most of its left-wing backers by its lack of zeal for "socialism" in the sense of nationalization of private industry, its failure to cut adrift from United States policy on Vietnam and from NATO in Europe, and its need to take close account of the views of the international bankers who have become its creditors.

This is not to say that Mr. Wilson does not share his government's odium, nor that there are not legitimate grounds for criticizing his leadership. But there is little evidence that under any leadership this government could recover the esteem of the country during the next year, when things will continue to be hard going economically.

Created Stir

Obviously, to some extent it hampers a resigning minister if he cannot honestly oppose the policy of the government he has left. But Mr. Gunter has done what he could do to stir up disquiet and canalize resentments.

Apart from questioning the leadership, he has deplored the lack of comradeship at the top of the party, the desertion of its working-class group roots and its domination by intellectuals.

He focussed these criticisms on the impending appointment of a new general secretary at Labor party headquarters to administer the party machine. The post required, he said "a powerful, tough politician" and those who heard him must have realized that he had chosen a cap that fitted his own personality very well.

For Mr. Gunter is a man who does not shrink from saying what he thinks, whatever its unpopularity. His bluntness as well as his trade union background have recalled in many people's minds the late Ernest Bevin. Both men struck powerful chords among ordinary electors and political opponents.

Symbolic

And if Mr. Gunter has a smaller personality and a much weaker power base than Mr. Bevin had — he was formerly President of the white-collar railway clerks' union — his symbolic importance as the last of the genuine trades union leaders in the Labor cabinet was considerable.

Nonetheless, there is a limited dividend to be derived from harking back to the Labor party's past as the political arm of the working-class movement, because in the swiftly-changing social composition of Britain it is the middle-classes which hold the key to the future. All Mr. Gunter can do is increase Labor's disorientation with itself and perhaps hasten its transformation or precipitate the realignment of the parties on the left to which many have been looking for years.

Many people believe that when that time comes the party is more likely to be led by another man than by Mr. Wilson, someone more like Exchequer Chancellor Roy Jenkins. But for the present, both Mr. Jenkins and Mr. Wilson are roped together trying to climb their way out of their party's discomfiture and the country's economic peril.

The departure of Mr. Brown and Mr. Gunter has taken out of the cabinet two of the prime minister's most powerful opponents. When the crunch comes it must be a cabinet revolt which will secure Mr. Wilson's downfall, but such a revolt might possibly be precipitated by critical speeches which both Mr. Brown and Mr. Gunter, from the freedom of the backbenches in the House of Commons, now are in a position to make.

A first test of the effectiveness of Mr. Gunter's resignation may well be seen in the influence it has on the election of the new party general secretary.

The new general secretary will be chosen by the Labor Party's national executive at the end of this month. Formally, their choice must be ratified by the party's annual conference in October. But it would be very surprising if the conference were to turn down the executive's choice.

If Housing Minister Anthony Greenwood gets the job — and Mr. Gunter has said "it is all sewn up for him" — that will show that Mr. Wilson's power is still unshaken. For Mr. Greenwood is an old left-wing associate of Mr. Wilson, and is certainly the man the prime minister wants.

But if Mr. Gunter's open canvassing for the post, and his appeal to trades union sentiment either secure it for himself or bring about a compromise choice, then that may mark the first open defeat for Labor's present leader.

Japanese Show Way In Rail Modernization

THE NATION

As late as the interval between the two World Wars, the idea prevailed . . . that the Japanese were mere copyists in engineering and physical sciences. This was an exaggeration, compounded by race prejudice and the tensions that existed between the two countries.

Actually, even before the turn of the century Japan had become a great military and industrial power, based, as under modern conditions it had to be, on a competent scientific and technological work force.

The extent to which we are beginning to copy Japanese rail techniques is . . . discussed in the April, 1968 issue of Proceedings of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers which is devoted to the latest . . . advances in transportation by land, sea and air, and looks ahead to the year 2000.

Several of the papers are by Japanese engineers. One, by Matsutaro Fujii, describes the famous New Tokaido Line (NTL) which connects Tokyo and Osaka, 320 miles to the west. High-speed, luxurious passenger service began in 1964 after a five-year construction period.

The double track, electrified line now carries an average of 150,000 passengers a day at a total revenue of around $1 million. The trains make the run in three hours, at an average speed of 100 mph and a maximum of 130 m.p.h. All trains are controlled from operations headquarters in Tokyo, with the dispatchers also in voice communication with the train drivers.

Plans and building are under way to extend NTL another 375 miles, and to build a similar railroad northward to the neighboring island of Hokkaido, with a length of 675 miles including an undersea tunnel some 20 miles long.

All this indicates that for distances up to, say, 600 miles, modernized train service can more than hold its own with airline competition. That being so it could help to relieve the dangerous congestion at major airports.

The Best Place In All the World?

By RICHARD J. NEEDHAM
The Globe and Mail

It is not the function of the writer to flatter or comfort the society in which he lives, but rather to point out its contradictions, its hypocrisies, its injustices, revealing as he does so the numerous points at which he himself is contradictory, hypocritical and unjust. In short, human.

Needham

Looking back on the four years I've been filling a small corner of a large newspaper. I know that I've often treated Canada and Canadians with wrath, with scorn, with derision. Those awful laws, those dreary politicians, that death-wish for "security," those middle-class morals, that fear of decisive action — I've clawed them all, and I'll certainly keep right on clawing them.

●

Yet I'm still here, still living in the middle of it, never going anywhere else, not even below the international border that's just 80 miles away. I haven't left Canada in years; I don't think I ever will again. It suits me; for a person of my type, it's the best place in the world; the best place I know of, anyhow.

I wasn't born here. Ireland, England and India had my early years, after which I came here, liked what I saw and settled in. Maybe I'm one of those people who were born in the wrong place (God, like man, makes mistakes) and had to go look for the right one. What makes this country the right one?

Canada is comprehensible — big, to be sure, but the jet planes have fixed that, turning a day's journey into an hour. What's left are 20 million people living in five distinct areas whose nature is easily grasped; and once grasped, appreciated.

Not as much as many people, but more perhaps than most people, I think I can say that I know Canada — how it works, the ground rules, the flavor and feeling of it, what's happening, what isn't happening and why.

Canada is varied; you don't have to go to Europe or Asia to find people and things that are "different"; they're right here.

Canada is sane. Being small in population and power, it can't afford dreams of glory, conquest, revenge. It doesn't have the ideological struggles that torment larger nations. Rage and hysteria are alien to the national temperament.

Few Canadians believe strongly in any social or political idea — strongly enough, that is, to persecute others for its sake. In Canada, you don't upset people by announcing you're a Communist, or a capitalist, come to that; I met a man the other day who told me he was both.

Canada is rich. Some people are saying (and I'm disposed to agree) that while Canada has a lower standard of living than the United States, it has a higher standard of life.

It's true Canadians have less than Americans in the way of money, cars, television, and such. But that's more than counter-balanced by the things Canada doesn't have — no imperial wars going on, no draft, no color conflict, no great problem of public order, no massive slums or massive poverty.

Canada is open — the land, the people. Once you get out of the Montreal and Toronto rabbit warrens, you find you have the whole landscape to yourself, the cleanliness and simplicity of nature pursuing its own leisurely devices.

The people change too; they, like nature, have time. North, East, West, where the land spreads out, there's kindliness and trust, there's that quality I've come to think of as basically Canadian — co-operative individualism.

A perfect place? Not at all; but perfect for me, with all its faults, because of its faults. I know them, know how to live with them, how to get around them, maybe.

I make some small effort to correct them. But I don't make much of an effort — that wouldn't be Canadian; and Canadian is what I am, what I've become, and glad of it.

Spock Fights On; Says War Illegal

EXCITEMENT causes baby Andrea Chipman to cry when his father Dr. Abram Chipman and Dr. Benjamin Spock leave Federal Court in Boston after being sentenced to two years in prison and fined $5,000 on conspiracy charges. Unable to grapple with the situation, Dr. Chipman turned the child over to the noted pediatrician with mixed results. (AP Wirephoto.)

BOSTON (CP) — Peace movement leaders plan a new surge of protests against the war in Vietnam following the sentencing Wednesday of Dr. Benjamin Spock and three other prominent opponents of the war.

The peace movement, which has been more or less in cold storage since prelimniary U.S.-North Vietnamese talks began in Paris in May, was rocked back into life by the sentences.

Spock said he will continue his active opposition to the Vietnam war despite a two-year prison sentence and a $5,000 fine for anti-draft activties.

"I'm stil not convinced I broke any law," Spock said after sentencing in U.S. district court. "There's not a shred of legality in the Vietnam war."

The 65-year-old pediatrician was convicted with his co-defendants June 14 on charges of conspiring to counsel, aid and abet young men to evade the draft.

Judge Francis J. W. Ford also imposed two-year prison sentences on Yale University Chaplain William Sloane Coffin Jr., 43; author Mitchell Goodman, 44, of Temple, Maine, and Harvard graduate student Michael Ferber, 23.

Coffin and Goodman were fined $5,000 and Ferber was fined $1,000.

APPEALS PLANNED

The maximum sentence was five years in prison and $10,000 fines.

At a news conference after the sentencing, Spock repeated his contention that the Vietnam war is illegal, an argument that Judge Ford rejected as a defence at the trial.

"I say to the American people wake up!" the pediatrician said. "This war could be stopped if millions of Americans stood up and shouted: 'Let's stop this war!'"

There were demonstrations outside the Boston court where the four were sentenced and in Philadelphia draft opponents put gags on statues of 12 historical figures.

There were other demonstrations in New York, Toronto and Vancouver. American draft dodgers picketed the U.S. consulate in Toronto.

In New York, a spokesman for the National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam sad, "We have been quiet for a while but now we are going to come crashing back into action again."

SENTENCES PROTESTED

Legal Fight May Outlast Conflict

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—Dr. Benjamin Spock, best-selling pacifer to two generations of young mothers, participated in his first peace demonstration on Easter 1962, feeling "acutely self-conscious and ridiculous."

Wednesday in a Boston court, the internationally-known baby specialist was sentenced to two years in jail and a $5,000 fine.

His crime: Conspiring with three colleagues, the U.S. government says, to counsel, aid and abet youths of the so-called Spock generation to refuse to serve in the Vietnam war.

The legal fight seems far from over. Appeals have been promised and could go to the U.S. Supreme Court, a long process. Indeed, the war could be settled before Spock's opposition to it has been ruled on by the courts.

Meanwhile, the gaunt New Englander, 65 years old, six feet, four inches tall, white-haired and a grandfather, has become a symbol—pro and con—of the ferment that has accompanied the war and a lot of other current aspects in American life too involving dissent.

NOT A PACIFIST

No pacifist, Spock served in the Second World War as a naval psychiatrist and supported the United Nations role in Korea against the Communists.

But not Vietnam.

"There's not a shred of legality in the Vietnam war," he insisted angrily Wednesday in Boston after sentencing. "I say wake up. Get out there and do something before it is too late."

Spock completed his celebrated book Baby and Child Care in 1946 and—mostly in paperback—it has sold more than 20,000,000 copies, outselling every other book in the U.S. except the Bible and Shakespeare.

It surpasses such giants as Peyton Place, Gone With the Wind, How to Win Friends and Influence People, Lady Chatterly's Lover and assorted cook books.

"What does Spock say?" became a byword among young matrons harassed by tantrums, tummy upsets or tedious non-progress in the infant realm of toilet trainng.

STARTED WITH SANE

His first peace demonstrations were with SANE, which pursues nuclear disarmament. That broadened to Vietnam, on grounds the war was "insane,' that President Johnson had "betrayed the country by broadening the war after electioneering in 1964 on a platform of caution.

But Spock critics, and they exist in some numbers, say he bears a heavy responsibility for the whole shape of modern American youth.

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, himself an American author and byword of sorts, saddled Spock with the heresy of "permissive" child-rearing that had created the "most undisciplined age in history."

Peale said in a recent sermon that two generations had been fed the principles of "feed 'em what ever they want, don't let them cry, instant gratification of needs."

"Two generations of parents who abandoned the old American home quality of discipline have caused our universities to inherit neurosis, neglect, permissiveness, creating a student generation that thinks it can get what it yells for, even student power or the control of universities themselves," Peale said.

Spock pleads not guilty.

REVISES SOME VIEWS

He freely admits he has revised some of his early views to some degrees and suggests in a last edition of Baby and Child Care that parents get tougher—"show more cheerful conviction," as he puts it—about toilet training disciplines.

Youths Burn Draft Cards

TORONTO (CP) — Two United States youths burned their draft cards on the steps of the U.S. consulate Wednesday during a demonstration protesting the sentencing of Dr. Benjamin Spock.

One of the youths stuffed the ashes of his draft card under the consulate door; but the other, Cody Wood, 20, said he intends to mail the ashes of his card to his draft board in Westwood, a suburb of Los Angeles.

He said the burning was a "symbolic gesture" in support of Dr. Spock and the U.S. anti-draft movement. The youths are safe from prosecution for draft evasion while in Canada.

2 Dead, 100 Injured

PFORZHEIM (Reuters)—Two persons were killed and at least 100 were injured Wednesday night in a sudden thunder storm which caused widespread damage near this West German town. The village of Wurmberg reported 114 houses damaged, 50 of them badly.

PROTESTORS to the two-year prison term given Dr. Benjamin Spock in connection with his anti-Vietnam war campaign, were rounded up by Toronto police in the Yorkville area Wednesday night. Among those taken to the police station was June Callwood well known magazine writer, who literally begged the police to pick her up. (CP Wirephoto.)

Writer Gets Paddy Wagon Ride to Jail

TORONTO (CP) — Magazine writer June Callwood was arrested Wednesday night following a sit-in to protest the two-year sentence given Dr. Benjamin Spock in Boston on anti-draft charges.

Miss Callwood, 44, was charged with obstructing police after a police van took her and two others away from the Yorkville Avenue area where 10 protesters had sat down in the middle of the road.

At least 10 others were arrested during a 45-minute disturbance in which trash cans on sidewalks were set ablaze and police officers were abused and pelted with soft-drink cans and cups.

The incident began when four protesters sat down in the street, bringing traffic to a halt. When police moved in three of the four left. Police carried the other to the side of the road, to be met by shouted insults.

JOINED MOB

Miss Callwood, vice-president of the Toronto Civil Liberties Union, joined a mob which surged behind police repeatedly asking why the youth was being arrested.

"Why don't you arrest me too?" she asked. An officer said he might. "Oh, goody," she said. "This will be my first bust."

She followed police as they cleared crowds of young people from the sidewalks, repeatedly asking to be arrested.

"They can bust the kids in the face, but they can't bust my face," she said before police arrested a well-dressed young man to whom she had been talking and who refused to move along when asked.

A white patrol wagon then stopped beside the crowd that had gathered around her and she was placed inside with another woman and a man.

Yorkville clergymen, social workers and psychologists moved into the area when the troublt began, insisting that it was not caused by Yorkville hippies but by outsiders who earlier had demonstrated in front of the U.S. consulate on University Avenue.

Soviet Tactics Change Despite Cairo Balloons

By ROBERT H. ESTABROOK
The Washington Post

UNITED NATIONS — Diplomats here are pondering why Egypt has floated three separate trial balloons within the past week relating to possible aspects of a Middle East peace settlement.

First, Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad said in Copenhagen that "We accept the realities, and one of the realities is Israel." Riad made this remark after conferring with United Nations mediator Gunnar Jarring in Stockholm, and added that the Arabs had been mistaken in making propaganda demands for the annihilation of Israel.

Next came a statement by a spokesman in Cairo that Egypt would be willing to have a UN force return to the area. Then there were diplomatic hints, also from Cairo, that Egypt might permit the passage of Israeli cargoes through the Suez Canal in return for a pullback of Israeli troops.

These efforts preceded and coincided with the visit of President Nasser to Moscow and the unexplained prolongation of his stay. A few days previously Jarring also had conferred with high Soviet officials.

Israeli sources are profoundly skeptical about what they regard as inadequate substitutes for peace negotiations which the Arabs still refuse. Each time Cairo has made a conciliatory statement, they say, it has subsequently been repudiated.

While Israel would help to reopen the canal on a basis that would guarantee rights to Israeli ships rather than mere cargoes, these sources add, it is not ready to withdraw troops except after a peace treaty.

But there may be some new elements in the current hints from Cairo. The Egyptians indicate willingness to talk about financial compensation of the Arab refugees rather than their physical return, and they have intimated that they might not insist on regaining control of the Gaza strip.

All this has brought speculation here that the timing of the Egyptian moves may be occasioned both by Jarring's efforts in Europe and by separate Soviet and British pressures to re-open the Suez Canal.

WHY I'M RUNNING
PETER POLLEN

Now that the N.D.P. Provincial Executive has nominated a candidate in Oak Bay, the Liberal candidate cites this as proof that his party is in no socialist alliance. Yet it was the local Oak Bay N.D.P. Association that decided not to ran a candidate. When reaching this local decision, they undoubtedly spoke for their members in Oak Bay. The local N.D.P. Chairman, Mr. Peter Bunn, was perfectly forthright, perhaps he was too honest for the professional N.D.P. and Liberal politicians. He said that the N.D.P. should support the Liberal candidate in Oak Bay. This galvanized Mr. Strachan into action and he found a brave lady to carry the N.D.P. banner in Oak Bay in an attempt to show that there was no coalition on the left. The Oak Bay residents are not fooled by all this. They know that the local N.D.P. membership are supporting the Liberals. What these two parties do have in common is their constant opposition to this free enterprise government. On 43 votes in the last legislative session the Liberals and N.D.P. voted together against the government. Bill 33 establishing the Mediation Commission was one such vote. The Liberals continue to be opposed to responsible legislation in the labour relations field. My Liberal opponent says that he generally supports the Bill but he is opposed to one detail of it. The principle in the Bill that he opposes is the fundamental basis of the whole measure, namely, that the Cabinet is permitted to refer a serious strike or lockout to the new Mediation Commission for a binding settlement. Both the N.D.P. and the Liberals are opposed to the most constructive legislative measure in Canada to maintain labour peace and build a strong economy.

Listen: Saturday, July 13, 9:05 to 10:00 p.m. — 1220 Radio — Rebroadcast of Premier Bennett's speech.

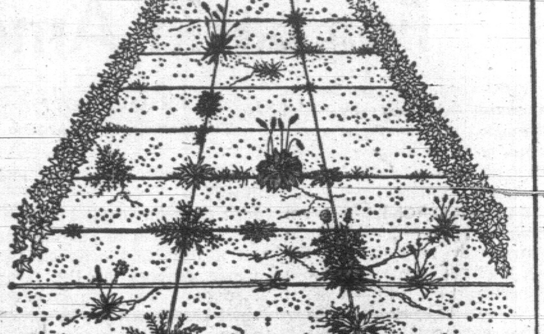
Patio or Driveway weeds?



FIGHT BACK WITH ORTHO!

Without bending . . . without stooping . . . without digging, you can get rid of every single weed that's marring your patio, your driveways, your walks, curbs or gutters. All you do is dilute and sprinkle TRIOX. It's as simple as that.

TRIOX does more than just wipe out established weeds. It prevents new growth for as long as two full years. Seeds wither and die before they can get started again, so you can forget about the work of old-fashioned weeding for a long, long time.

A word of caution. Since TRIOX application kills all vegetation, you don't want to use it on lawns or cultivated areas. For lawn weeds, use ORTHO SUPER WEED-B-GON.

Whatever your weed problem, ORTHO can have it licked this very weekend. See your garden supplier today!

MacMillan Bloedel

EDMONTON (CP) — Opposition MLAs Wednesday deplored extension of an agreement with MacMillan (Bloedel Ltd. to start construction of a pulp mill near Whitecourt 100 miles northwest of here.

The government granted a two-year extension Tuesday after the forestry firm requested a four-year extension on the original starting date of July 1, 1969.

Today, Conservative MLA Hugh Horner, whose Lac Ste. Anne riding takes in Whitecourt, said the government should have concelled the lease and put it up for bids by other lumber companies. He said Lands and Forests Minister H. A. Ruste should resign over the decision to extend the agreement.

Liberal MLA Bill Switzer meantime said that while the extension is disappointing to the Whitecourt area, "it would probably have been unwise for the government not to extend the lease." Pulp mills are not producing up to capacity, he said.

Melchers Splits

MONTREAL (CP) —Melchers Distilleries Ltd., Wednesday approved a common stock split to take effect Friday and declared a dividend of 25 cents a share.

At a meeting here, shareholders voted for the split by which all shareholders registered at the close of business on Friday will receive a certificate for four additional shares for each share held.

After the split capital will consist of $2,500,000 common shares without nominal or par value of which 1,475,795 will be outstanding and fully paid.

Placer Development

MALACCA, Malaysia (Reuters)—Placer Development Ltd., the Canadian firm which started off-shore prospecting for tin and other minerals along the Malacca coast about a month ago, stopped operations last weekend after a government warning.

Last month the Malaysian land and mines minister told foreign firms they must not interfere with government arrangements with local companies for offshore prospecting in West Malaysia.

Placer had joined a local company to prospect for tin and other minerals, and suspended work pending talks locally.

Trade Figures Prove U.K. Devaluation

LONDON (AP) — Britain narrowed her trade gap last month and cut the size of its import bill, the board of trade reported today in its first statistical indication that devaluation is beginning to work.

Although the country was still in the red on overseas trade last month by £50,000,000 ($128, million), the underlying trend made immediate impact on the foreign exchange markets in London and pushed the pound sharply up by about one-quarter of a cent.

Imports, which had been sucked into Britain by a consumer spending spree earlier this year and by industrial stockpiling, showed a sharp turn-around. They dropped by £39,000,000 ($99.84 million to £609,000,000 ($1.559 billion).

At the same time exports and re-exports continued a slow but steadily upward climb, rising by £10,000,000 to £508,000,000 ($1.3 billion).

This gave a crude trade gap of £101,000,000 ($258.5 million), aso down from May.

Profits from shipping and insurance cut the crude deficit almost by half. The visible deficit dropped by £36,000,000 ($92.1 million) to £50,000,000 ($128 million)—the best one-month slash in the deficit since devaluation of the pound last November.

The government board of trade said the improvement was made despite several adverse factors, among them a drop in trade with France because of the crisis there. In addition, overseas deliveries of ships and planes, which usually vary erratically from month to month, were down in June.

TORONTO (CP) — Britain increased its exports to Canada by about $36,000,000 in the first four months of 1968 over the similar period last year, to $212,400,000.

But it will need to boost them a further $120,000,000 simply to stay in the same balance-of-payments position it was in last year, because of the devaluation of the British pound last November.

This is what Sir Ralph Perring, a former Lord Mayor of London and vice-chairman of the Canadian exports committee of the British National Export Council, said in Toronto Wednesday.

Speaking to a Canadian export seminar, he said Britain now is on an aggressive export promotion campaign. Most of her recent problems are in politics rather than industrial failure, he said.

But talking to reporters later, he admitted Britsh trade promotions, such as the British Week in Toronto last fall, would probably be held infrequently in future. They would be replaced by what he called "veritcal promotions of specifcl British industries, allowing better concentration of researchd and marketing facilities.

Mineral Output Up 10%

TORONTO (CP) — Canada is still the world's leading nickel and zinc producer and ranks second in production of asbestos, cadmium, cobalt, molybdenum, sulphur and uranium, a survey by the Mining Association of Canada shows.

Canada produced more than 500,350,000 pounds of nickel worth about $467,200,000 last year. Zinc production totalled about 2,169,000,000 pounds, worth $314,300,000.

Total mineral production was valued at $4,390,000,000 — a record—and up 10 per cent from last year's production. Minng production now forms about seven per cent of the country's gross national product.

About 60 per cent of the output was exported to make up nearly 31 per cent of Canada's total merchandise exports.

About $1,961,000,000 worth, or 57 per cent of the total was exported to the United States. The United Kingdom took another 14.5 per cent, Japan 7.8 per cent, the European Common Market countries 7.5 per cent with the remainder scattered among other countries.

THE TOP TEN

The were crude petroleum, worth $886,000,000; copper $563,000,000; nickel, iron ore, $455,000,000; zinc, natural gas, $19,000,000; asbestos, $163,000,000; sand and gravel, $158,000,000 and gold, $111,000,000.

Alberta was second, producing 22.7 per cent of Canada's total, accounted for about two-thirds of Canada's total, worth $996,800,000. Crude oil accounted for about two-thirds of the Alberta production.

Other leading minnig producers were: Quebec, $736,000,000; Saskatchewan, $370,000,000; British Columbia $360,800,000; Newfoundland, $259,800,000; Manitoba, $186,600,000; Northwest Territories, $115,000,000.

Court Rules Against Hughes Injunction

NEW YORK (UPI) — A U.S. district court judge Wednesday rejected the American Broadcasting Company's plea for an injunction restraining billionaire industrialist Howard Hughes from offering to buy a controlling interest in ABC for $148,500,000.

U.S. District Judge Dudley Bonsal ruled that to grant the temporary injunction might do financial harm to ABC stockholders who want to accept the offer tendered by the Hughes Tool Co. of Houston.

"The balance of hardship in my view, tips aganst granting the temporary restraining order," Bonsal said.

ABC issued a statement after the hearing saying "today's decison was merely a temporary ruling and a full hearing will be set on the issues."

Lawyers for both sides agreed to meet in Bonsal's chambers Thursday to set a date for the hearing.

The Hughes Tool Co., which is wholly owned by the publicity-shy billionaire, offered to buy 43 per cent of ABC's common stock, 2,000,000 of the 4,700,000 outstanding shares, for $74.25 a share.

"It may be that a stockholder would wish to sell his shares at $74.25 and may never have had another such offer," the judge said.

BIF DISCUSSION ON SOUTH AFRICA

Hints of New Gold Purchase Plan

By ERIC WENTWORTH

PARIS—Chances for agreement among central banks and their governments on some policy to allow renewed gold buying from South Africa appear greater in the wake of a bankers' meeting over the weekend at Basel, Switzerland.

The central bankers discussed tne delicate gold-purchase question in their monthly secret session at the Bank for International Settlements, and may have moved closer to a consensus.

Some sources warned against reports the bankers had reached anything close to a firm accord. At the same time, these sources said agreement may come by the end of the summer.

The future course of South African gold sales will affect success of the so-called "two-tiered" gold market launched by the United States and six other major nations at a Washington meeting March 17.

RESERVES DRAINING

The national central banks represented at the March meeting, called to halt a speculative gold rush that was draining their official reserves of the precious metal, agreed to end the "gold pool" system by which they were feeding reserves into the London market to keep buying demand from driving the price too high.

They agreed to continue official dealings in gold among themselves at the offical price of $35 an ounce, but said they saw no need to make additional purchases of new gold from South Africa or other sources.

The price on the free market which they had formerly stabilized through the "gold pool," was thenceforth to find its own level.

At the same time, the bankers realized, if the free-market price rose too high their or other nations' central banks might be sorely tempted to sell gold into it for a profit over the official price. This could wreck the "two-tier" system.

PRICES NEAR EQUAL

Keeping the free-market price near the official price, in the eyes of the U.S. among others, means that South Africa as the free world's leading producer must sell enough of her new gold into that market.

To the extent South Africa sold to central banks, the volume of her gold available for the private market would be reduced and so, presumably, the price in that market would rise.

Thus South Africa, which stopped selling gold back in March, has met no success so far in making the rounds of central banks to arrange new sales. Thus too the U.S. has been strongly opposed to purchases from South Africa by the 107-nation International Monetary Fund.

But some central banks outside the U.S. have refused South African sales offers only with great reluctance, and members of the IMF are divided on what that agency should do.

DIVIDE SALES

One logical solution would be for South Africa to sell part of her new gold to various central banks or the IMF at the official price of $35 an ounce and the rest into the free market in sufficient volume to keep the price there near the offical price.

Apparently there was something approaching a consensus on this idea among the representatives of 14 leading central banks who gathered at Basel last weekend. South Africa itself was not represented.

But questions arise as to just what the sales volume through each channel should be, and whether it should be controlled if at all by general policy or by some formula possibly tied to the free-market price.

The free-market price itself, however, is influenced by the actions of speculators and other factors as well as by the inflow of gold from a source like South Africa. Since the "two-tier" system began April 1, the London price has risen as high as $42.60. Tuesday afternoon, it fell to $39.80 from Monday's $40.85.

PRICE COULD FALL

In addition, the interests of South Africa herself must be considered. She would naturally profit from higher prices.

Should South Africa have to sell all her gold on the free market, it's conceivable the price there could even fall below the official $35 level.

Some central banks are said to take a dim view of that happening, since it might reflect on the value of their own official reserves. Central bank or IMF purchases at the official $35 price could put a floor under the free-market price.

An unconfirmed report circulated Tuesday that the IMF was discussing a plan whereby it would act as intermediary for central banks wishing to buy new gold from South Africa. The central bankers were said to have reached a "preliminary understanding" on this idea at Basel.

However, another source discounted the prospect of the IMF acting as an intermediary of this type.

Crop Prospects Continue Good

OTTAWA (CP) — Crop prospects remain good throughout the Prairie provinces, although recent hot weather has caused deterioration in dry areas, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has reported.

In other regions, the warm weather caused crops to advance rapidly, the bureau said.

Moisture supplies are favorable over most of Manitoba and crop prospects are excellent. Recent timely rains in Saskatchewan have maintained favorable prospects although more moisture is needed to prevent crop loss in the south.

The central regions of Alberta remain dry but crops are excellent in the south and in the Peace River district.

Franc Still Bleeds

PARIS (AP)—French gold and foreign currency reserves fell nearly $400,000,000 in the week ending July 4, the Bank of France announced today.

The drain of $398,000,000 U.S. raised to $1,720,000,000 the reserve losses provoked by France's mid-June crisis.

The report, included in the Bank of France's weekly statement, indicated recent government measures had not stopped the hemorrhage of the franc.

WINNING ISN'T ALWAYS FUN

Pain is often part of price of victory and it was that way for Detroit's Bill Squires during National Lacrosse Association game Wednesday night at Memorial Arena. Squires absorbed considerable punishment while helping Olympics to 15-10 win over Victoria Shamrocks. Here Squires is receiving attention from worried mates after suffering face cuts and buises when slammed into end boards. Victoria's Ken Alexander received major penalty in second-period play.

Mohawks Guided Raid; Then There Was George

Olympics Grab Huge Lead; Survive Late Irish Surge

DETROIT 15, VICTORIA 10

By DOUG PEDEN

Toronto Maple Leafs didn't want George Stephens. Neither did Peterborough Lakers. Victoria Shamrocks claim he's pure poison.

Detroit Olympics love the guy. They wouldn't swap him for any other piece of property in the National Lacrosse Association or a sizable chunk of gold.

Stephens is the young goaltender who held the Detroit fort at Memorial Arena Wednesday night after a pair of Mohawk Indians had guided a fast-striking raiding party that almost wiped out the Shamrocks in the first half of a boisterous, penalty-saturated game.

Often lethargic and sometimes confused, the Rocks were struggling to salvage their scalps in the early going against the fast-breaking, dead-eye-shooting Olympics. They were trailing 13-3 midway in the second period before they settled into the hard-checking, running tactics that had enabled them to win four straight games and take four of their last six.

By that time it was obvious the Rocks would need a minor miracle or two to pull out a victory. They gave it a big try to score seven of the last 10 goals and would have made it uncomfortably close for the now-faltering Olympics except for the brilliant and stubborn shot-stopping of Stephens.

Stephens, who tried to earn a berth with Toronto and drew his release and later suffered the same fate with Peterborough, made a series of superb saves in the final period and Olympics were able to stagger home with a 15-10 triumph.

Most of the 4,481 fans who made up the largest crowd of the season in Memorial Arena were convinced the Shamrocks had squandered their chances after the Olympics scored the first four goals of the second period to run up that formidable 13-3 advantage.

Jim Bishop, the energetic coach of the Eastern Division leaders, didn't see it that way. As far as he was concerned, his club, weary after an all-out struggle the previous night while losing a 16-14 decision at New Westminster, was in deep trouble in the final 20 minutes.

"There's the guy who saved us," he said, pointing at Stephens in the Detroit dressing room. "He absolutely won it for us.

"And don't forget our Mohawk Indians, they were great for us."

Nobody was likely to deny that Gaylord Powless and Bill Squire had earned the praise.

Powless, the 21-year-old whiz who had collected six points at New Westminster, fired four goals and added three assists to take of over the association's individual scoring lead. He now has a total of 90 points for a one-point advantage over Peterborough's John Davis.

Shamrocks Forgot Checking Plans

Squires, getting one goal and one assist. wasn't as prominent in the scoring parade but he punished the Shamrocks. He checked tenaciously, snatched a flock of loose balls and often sent his mates winging out of their own end on fast-breaking sorties. He also absorbed a lot of punishment and finished with his face adorned by stitches and angry bruises.

Smooth Grant Heffernan was another Olympic who displayed fine scoring skill and fired three goals.

Heffernan may also have contributed a crushing blow to Victoria when he collided with Shamrock goalie Barry Forbes while scoring to give Detroit a 2-1 lead at three minutes of the opening period.

Shaken up, Forbes was off for about three minutes for repairs while his replacement, Doug Thompson, stopped one of two Detroit shots. Barry was below his usual form when he returned to the nets and although he was a sizzling stopper in the final 30 minutes, the Olympics had all the goals they were to need.

It was a dissappointing night for the Rocks, who were so intent on a victory that their dressing room seemed charged with electricity while they waited for the battle to begin.

Perhaps too tense and too anxious, they forgot to run or check and played some of their worst lacrosse while allowing the visitors to romp to the big lead.

They saved face and finally made it an interesting evening for the spectators with their closing drive, but this didn't ease the pain of defeat.

"I guess we were just too tight at the start of the game," commented coach Dave Unwin. "Our plan was to go out to check them at the start and wait for the breaks. Then we forgot all about checking and didn't force any breaks."

Victoria's scoring leader, Ranjit Dillon, didn't do much in the first two periods but he gave the Olympics fits with quick attacks in the final session and wound up with two goals and three assists.

Reg Foster and rugged Bill Spotwood, who did much to ignite the Rocks in the middle period, collected three and two goals, respectively.

Delayed at the start due to the late arrival of a plane, the game turned out to be the longest of the Victoria season. It stretched almost three hours through penalties and injuries.

Occasionally falling for theatrics of players being checked, referees Whitey Severson and Ralph Plumeridge whistled 14 minors, two majors and two misconducts against the Shamrocks. Olympics collected 18 minors and a major.

There were several minor scuffles and a more serious one in the closing minutes, when Spotswood and Garry Hind swapped punches and each earned a minor and major sentence. Victoria's Larry McNabb picked up his second misconduct in the same ruckus.

Camps Closed to Vets; All-Star Game Doubtful

By The Associated Press

The posibility that the college all-star game in Chicago Aug. 2 may become an early casualty of the hassle between National Football League owners and players was a step nearer reality today.

Vince Lombardi, general manager of Green Bay's champions, followed an order handed down by the owners earlier this week and politely ejected star quarterback Bart Starr and 10 other veterans from the Packers' training camp Wednesday.

Even if a settlement is reached in the dispute that threatens a suspension of NFL activity for the 1968 season—and there were no indications of this—it may not come in time to save the all-star match.

Lombardi has insisted he won't send the Packers against the collegians in the game just a little more than three weeks away unless he can field a well-conditioned and representative team.

Starr and Co. weren't the ony ones with rejection problems. Quarterback Roman Gabrie and Pat Studstill, former Detroit Lion, were told to leave when they tried to check in with 13 rookies at the Los Angeles Rams' camp at Fullerton, Calif.

PLAN OWN CAMP

And Dallas Cowboy veterans reportedly planned to set up their own training camp at Thousand Oaks, Calif., in an effort to get around the owners' decision that all veterans will be barred from regular training sessions until the controversy is settled.

Dave Manders, player representative of the Cowboys, was quoted as saying the oldtimers had decided to hold their own camp, minus coaches, because "there's too much at stake. We're going for the title."

Meanwhile, things were rosy in the American Football League, where players and owners announced agreement Wednesday on a new two-year contract providing increases in player pensions, insurance and in exhibition game pay.

Under the new pact, a five-year player at age 65 would receive $689 a month instead of $500, a 10-year player would get $1,132 instead of $775 and a 15-year man would receive $1,497 instead of $990.

Exhibition game pay was boosted from $100 per game for each player to $125 for a two-year man, $150 for third- and fourth-year players and $250 for a player with five or more years in the league.

MORE BENEFITS

Medical coverage for each active player in the league was increased from $15,000 to $50,000.

The situation was just the opposite in the senior league.

Reports that the NFL owners were planning further negotiations with the players were quickly dismissed by NFL president Art Modell, also president of Cleveland Browns.

"There are no further negotiations contemplated at the moment," Modell said in Chicago. "They have broken off. Most of the owners have left for their respective homes."

There also was a report that the players planned another vote on the matter. But Dave Manders' player representative of Dallas Cowboys, reported Detroit's John Gordy, president of the NFL Players Association, said no further polls would be taken until the owners come up with a better offer.

The players are demanding $100,000 from each of the 16 NFL teams for their pension fund.

ROUGHRIDERS WIN

Leroy's Fumble Costly to Lions

By The Canadian Press

When head coach Leo Cahill moved from Toronto Rifles of the Continental Football League to Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference, he brought Joe Williams and Tom Wilkinson with him.

Both played briefly with the Argonauts last season, but without significant success. It may be different this year, however.

Williams ran for two touchdowns and Wilkinson ran for one and set up another as the Argonauts opened their exhibition season with a 35-1 trouncing of Winnipeg Blue Bombers Wednesday night.

In a Western Football Conference pre-season game, Saskatchewan Roughriders nipped British Columbia Lions 9-8 before 26,095 fans in Vancouver—a Canadian record for an exhibition game.

Williams, a star in the Continental League and a flop in the National Football League, took a big step toward establishing himself in the CFL.

RUNS 86 YARDS

His second touchdown, late in the fourth quarter, was a spectacular 86-yard run that elated the Canadian National Exhibition crowd of 20,784.

Saskatchewan's touchdown against the Lions came in the third quarter after a fumbled pitchout by Leroy Sledge on B.C.'s 23-yard line. Veteran Saskatchewan fullback George Reed scored from two yards out and Bill Goods converted.

The Riders' other points came on a safety touch in the second quarter when Bill Lasseter reversed his field on a punt reception and was tackled in his own end zone.

Vancouver scored in the last minute of play on a two-yard plunge by rookie fullback Jim Evenson. Ted Gerela, who kicked a first-quarter single, converted.

Neither team managed to produce much offence in the game played through intermittent rain and hampered by numerous player changes.

FEDIW FINISHES THIRD BEHIND SENTINEL ACE

VANCOUVER—West Vancouver Sentinel's Greg Yorke won the 200-metre B.C. high school sprint championship and the Percy Williams Trophy Wednesday night before 26,095 fans at half-time in the British Columbia-Saskatchewan football exhibition.

Bill Fediw of Victoria came third behind Daryl Logan of North Surrey as Yorke finished in 22.6 seconds.

Norme Trerise of Vancouver, a student at the University of Oregon, put forth a strong kick finish to overtake Canadian mile record-holder Dave Bailey of Toronto and win the B.C. Sports Hall of Fame Mile with a 4:06.4 clocking.

Gary Grabs Early Lead

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (CP) — Gary Player of South Africa seized the early lead with one-under-par 71 for 145 in the second round of the British open golf championship today.

Player, the 1959 British Open champion and winner of everything else worth winning in golf, was the first in the field to genuinely defeat the rugged back nine of the 7,252-yard Carnoustie course.

Al Johnston of Montreal, veteran Canadian whose entry was listed from the U.S., shot himself out of the tournament with a second-round 80, duplicating his opening effort and the 169 was far too high to make the day's cutoff to the low 70 and ties in the field of 130.

Colwood Crew Close To Golf League Title

Royal Colwood trimmed Gorge Vale's chances to retain the Inter-Club League championship by downing host Uplands 6-3 on Wednesday.

Colwood now has a four-point edge over second-place Victoria, which upset Gorge by the same score Wednesday on the Oak Bay course. Colwood needs only three points in the final round against Victoria to ensure the win.

Earl Davies paced Colwood by firing consecutive birdies from the 13th to 17th holes and adding a par on the 18th to hold the four-ball while downing Don Billsborough, 2 and 1.

Wayne Spins No-Hitter Despite Walking Seven

LAKE COWICHAN—Wayne O'Malley walked seven batters, hit one, and still pitched a no-hit victory.

With this feat O'Malley guided Victoria All-Stars into the semi-finals of the Vancouver Island (15-year-olds) Babe Ruth baseball playoff with a 16-3 crushing of Ladysmith-Chemainus Wednesday.

Victoria now faces the winner of tonight's 6:15 game between Lake Cowichan and Nanaimo to determine which team goes undefeated into the finals of the double loss elimination tourney.

ROCKS SUFFER DOUBLE DEFEAT

Victoria Shamrocks were double losers Wednesday. Not only did the Irish drop a 15-10 National Lacrosse Association verdict to Detroit Olympics, but they also lost a decision in the commissioner's office.

Western division commissioner Tom English announced Wednesday night the reversal of a decision that awarded wins to Shamrocks and New Westminister Salmonbellies at the expense of Portland Adanacs.

This penalty was originally imposed following the use of two unsigned Portland players — Tom McVie and Jack Bionda — in games Adanacs won against Salmonbellies on June 7 and Shamrocks on June 8.

* * *

The announcement Wednesday eliminated the questioned games entirely from league standings and dropped Victoria and New Westminister from a first-place tie into second.

Portland protested the severity of the penalty and English discussed the matter with Terry Kelly of Oshawa, president of the NLA, and Spence Lyons of Toronto, the league's vice-president.

"It was agreed the forfeiture was too stiff a penalty under the circumstances," English stated. The games will now not be counted and Portland's games with Victoria on August 6 and New Westminster Sept. 7 will be four point games — counting as two victories and two defeats.

Points scored in the discarded games will still count on the individual records and English added: "The ideal situation would be to replay both games but the schedule does not permit it."

Home No Haven For Boxla Leafs

By The Canadian Press

Things were supposed to be different when Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Lacrosse Association returned home.

Last week, the Maple Leafs dropped four consecutive games during a road trip in the western division. It was the same old story Wednesday night, when Montreal Canadiens defeated Toronto 13-10 in an eastern division game watched by 4,740 fans at Maple Leaf Gardens.

The Canadiens, who trail the third-place Maple Leafs by six points, received four goals from Ken Thompson. Ron Roy, a former Maple Leaf, added three and Terry Davis two. Other Montreal scorers were Joe Hore, Earl MacNeil, Brian Ahearne and Michel Blanchard.

Baseball House Is Tidy After Nats Adopt Split

INJURED more severely than first expected, slugging first-baseman Harmon Killebrew will be lost to Minnesota Twins for six to eight weeks. Killebrew tore leg muscle while stretching for low throw as his American League club was losing 1-0 to National League in All-Star major league baseball game Tuesday.

HOUSTON (AP)—For the time being, at least, major league baseball has set its house in order.

Meetings of the National and American Leagues Wednesday led to the adoption of a two-divisional split of the NL's 12 teams in 1969 and agreement by the AL to increase its schedule from the previously agreed 156 games to 162.

That means both leagues will operate with two six-team divisions with a best-of-five playoff between division champions determining the World Series opponents.

Originally, the Nationals, who move into Montreal and San Diego next year, had voted to stay with a single 12-team league playing 162 games next year. Meanwhile, the Americans, adding Kansas City and Seattle, agreed to two divisions of six and 156-game schedule.

Commissioner William D. Eckert and baseball's executive council, recognizing the chaos two separate systems could create in the sport, urged the Nationals to split providing the Americans would revert to the 162-game schedule.

ANNOUNCE DIVISIONS

The AL went along and the Nationals announced the following divisions for 1969:

One division comprised: New York, Montreal, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago and St. Louis.

The other division comprised: San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, Houston, Cincinnati and Atlanta.

Earlier, the Americans had split this way:

The other division had: Cleveland, New York, Detroit, Baltimore, Boston and Washington.

The plan calls for teams in the same division to play one another 18 times—nine at home and nine away while meeting clubs in the other division 12 times—six at home and six on the road.

RAISES PROBLEMS

Naturally, this eliminates choice attractions for certain clubs and it was this problem that caused the most trouble Wednesday.

The Mets, for example, were hesitant to surrender their home game against both Los Angeles and San Francisco because of the drawing power the Dodgers and Giants have in New York.

"We voted again and again until we broke the log jam," said Warren Giles, president of the National League, who presided at the day-long meeting.

STEP FORWARD

Once the Nationals reached their decision, they presented it to the AL at a joint session that lasted scarcely five minutes. Now baseball was ready to present its united front.

"This is a great step forward," said Commissioner Eckert, "showing co-operation and uniformity."

But Chicago White Sox owner Arthur Allyn said: "The White Sox are unhappy both with the American League divisional arrangement and the decision to return to 162 games. We will appeal to the commissioner."

He indicated that a better divisional setup could be found, calling the NL plan which combined four established teams with one 1969 expansion team and one 1962 expansion team "far superior."

Darkness prevented extra innings in a Senior Amateur Baseball League game Wednesday night at Layritz Park and Transport Workers were forced to settle for a temporary 2-2 tie with Independents after seven innings.

Mike McAvoy sent Workers ahead with a fourth inning two-run homer but Russ Ball evened the count in the fifth with a two-run single.

Tom Sallaway was stranded at second base after hitting a double for Independents at the bottom of the seventh.

LET'S NOT FORGET:

One year ago the Premier of this Province declared: "B.C. is but a goblet to be drained."

A year later, after the voters of B.C. spoke out for Canada on June 25th, the Premier suddenly says that the goblet is now a loving cup.

SEPARATIST POSTURE:

He realizes his separatist posture is not in tune with the times. He and his candidate realize that there is a crying need for greater Federal-Provincial co-operation and they promise that there will be.

I agree with this now. I agreed with it a year ago.

Bet let us not forget that it was the Premier of this Province who refused to attend Federal-Provincial conferences on behalf of our people.

Let us not forget that it was the Premier of this Province who refused to co-operate in the building of the vital Roberts Bank super-port and who set up a Provincial Harbours Board of his own, to which he appointed Mr. Gaglardi.

Let's remember that the Premier is adaptable. He changes his position at every election.

If you believe that there should be someone in our Legislature to remind him of his instant promise for better Federal-Provincial relations, I respectfully solicit your vote on July 15th.

FIRED Wednesday by Baltimore Orioles was manager Hank Bauer, who guided Orioles to World Series baseball title in 1966. With team since 1964, Bauer will be paid remainder of $50,000 contract for this season and will be replaced by coach Earl Weaver, 39, former minor league player and manager. "It wasn't much of a surprise," said Bauer, 46. "Somebody had to take the blame for our poor record this season."

League Ignores Reply Deadline

Operators of teams in the B.C. Junior Hockey League are apparently ignoring an ultimatum from the B.C. section of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association regarding the league's position with the independent Canadian Hockey Association.

Don Winslade of New Westminster, the B.C. president of the CAHA, has advised the six league franchises, Victoria, New Westminster, Kamloops, Kelowna, Vernon and Penticton, that they have until July 15 to indicate whether or not they plan to stay in the CAHA or face possible expulsion from the association.

BCJHL president Clem Bird said from Penticton, "The CAHA constitution says that we have to declare our intentions by Sept. 1. We'll get around to it before then — we have no intention of rushing the matter."

Poor Direction Puts Pygmalion With Amateurs

By AUDREY JOHNSON

PYGMALION
By George Bernard Shaw
Produced by Canadian Art Theatre at McPherson Playhouse

Professor Higgins	Derek Ralston
Colonel Pickering	Wally McSween
Mrs. Pearce	Dorothy Fowler
Eliza Doolittle	Toni Sinclair
Alfred Doolittle	Bernard Harby
Mrs. Higgins	Ann Cameron
Parlor Maid	Ann Hungerford
Mrs. Eynsford Hill	Pat Thompson

Indoctrinated by the amount of semi-pro and professional theatre active in Victoria recently, one might expect theatre hailing from the much larger centre of Vancouver—especially a declared "professional repertory art theatre"—to achieve at least an equal standard.

Unfortunately the Canadian Art Theatre's Pygmalion falls far short of what has become an acceptable amateur standard in this city.

Blocking of Act II—the first to be visual as Act I is sound only — could not have been clumsier or made more difficult for the actors, with Higgins and Pickering forced to share their moments at opposite extremes of the stage.

GOOD VETERAN

Toni Sinclair, it is reasonable to believe, could have given us a fair Eliza if she had been more expertly directed.

She has her moments in Act II but quickly becomes monotonous. Timing in her speeches and any real sense of rhythm is lacking, but this is a fault with most of the cast and suggested that nobody, including the director, had properly listened to anybody.

The famous tea-party scene which can be a director's as well as an actor's plum, is the worst disappointment of all and travesty of the Shavian concept.

Static and unimaginative, hideously costumed, the effect is a burlesque of the elegant lampoon of society manners of the period that Shaw presented and sinks to a low level of amateurishness.

As far as character concepts are concerned, trite tags abound and as it is impossible to approach Shaw with stock types as a guide, Wally McSween's Colonel Pickering and Dorothy Fowler's housekeeper are totally wrong.

Doolittle the dustman, a gem of a role, is spoiled by being ill-paced and through the disadvantage of the blocking. Once again, the actor suffers at the hands of the director.

The production will be repeated tonight, Friday and Saturday with curtain time at 8:30 p.m.

Pianist Handles Varied Stylings

By BERYL PROUDMAN

As part of the current Summer Chamber Music Festival, Lamar Crowson presented a piano recital at the University of Victoria Wednesday night.

Like many fine pianists Mr. Crowson sometimes coaxed the keys with cushion-tipped fingers while at others he pounded the keyboard with brittle precision, but he excelled many pianists in the scholarly understanding with which he interpreted so signifciantly the varied styles of contrasted composers.

From the first bars of the Chaconne in G. by Handel it was clear that his forte lay in the exquisite, controlled pianissimo from which his magnificent crescendos rose.

Played with a full range of styling and dynamic variety, the Handel leapt to life.

Two Haydn Sonatas reinforced the impression of authority and understanding his opening number had already suggested.

The second Sonata in C Minor was difficult enough to tax a virtuoso player and the ornamentation required great dexterity. As well as the necessary control to meet the technical demands of this work Mr. Crowson demonstrated admirable good taste in the discretion with which he curbed what might easily have become flamboyant distortion.

Scholars are still trying to prove that Schubert was a fine pianoforte composer and, despite the odds, Mr. Crowson made a valiant but futile attempt to further their cause by his playing of Schubert's Sonata in B Flat.

Such magic dream-mood pieces as Debussy's Preludes Book 1 hardly feel tangible enough to have been captured on a printed page. The success with which Mr. Crowson drew the audience into the net they cast can easily be gauged by the barrage of explosive coughs which erupted at the end — enough to prove that people would rather suffocate than destroy the fragile atmosphere with a disruptive cough.

Preludes like Voiles (2) and Des Pas Sur La Neige (6) have an out-of-time mystery which fits them for the Twilight Zone.

La Vent Dans La Pleine (3) conjures pictures of aeolian harps stirred by gentle breezes and with the roaring battering West Wind of Mr. Crowson swept any lingering cobwebs out of the hall.

La Fille Aux Cheveaux de Lin (8) was successfully put back into context but La Cathedrale Engloutie raised a particularly high hurdle for the artist.

The self-explanatory Serenade Interromptue (9), La Danse de Puck (11) and the tongue-in-cheek Minstrels (12) were matched by the bright impertinent encore with which the pianist rewarded the vociferous audience.

Faculty members of the summer school will present their last recital tonight at 8 and students taking the course will be presented in Friday's program.

Have a cool one.
Thanks. make mine an Ambassador with FREE air conditioning.

Buying a car this summer? You might just as well get a cool one . . . it won't cost you any more. That's if you buy an Ambassador. You see, this year, American Motors decided to make air conditioning standard equipment on the popular-priced Ambassador.

	Ambassador	Ford	Chevrolet	Plymouth
Standard Equip. Air Conditioning?	YES	NO	NO	NO
Extra Cost of Air Conditioning	NIL	$394.	$458.30	$441.15

After all, it's not the first time that American Motors has led the industry.

The other car manufacturers don't quite see it that way.

Until such time as they decide to follow American Motors' example, you reap double benefits. Not only will you enjoy the luxurious comfort of Kelvinator air conditioning, free, but when the time comes to trade your Ambassador, it will be worth more. Just because it has air conditioning.

Tonight, take your last hot drive. Head for your nearby American Motors dealer and take an Ambassador out for a long, cool test drive.

When you've done that, answer this question: "Why should I pay more for air conditioning when I can get it free?"

Oh yes, one more thing. Save yourself the trouble of shopping around in the heat. Ambassador by American Motors is the only popular-priced car that comes equipped with air conditioning as standard equipment. The others just sell from air-conditioned showrooms.

Victoria Man Faces Trial

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — A 49-year-old Victoria man charged with criminal negligence in the traffic death of a child was committed for trial after a preliminary hearing Wednesday.

Paul Traverse was charged after three-year-old Darwin Kerr died May 29 in hospital after being found on a roadside near his home in McAlister, 35 miles north of Williams Lake.

Suharto's Son Fined

JAKARTA (AP) — President Suharto's 18-year-old son was fined the equivalent of 85 cents by an Indonesian police court Wednesday for speeding and hitting a British embassy car. The son went into court after his father ignored advice from his aides not to allow the case to be heard in public.

Red Light Fortune Claimed by 'Wife'

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—It's doubtful whether Sydney's dogs and cats will get an estate of $100,000 or so that grew out of profits in the red-light district.

The story goes back 15 years, when Joseph Borg came to Australia as a penniless 20-year-old from Malta. He got together some money, gradually acquiring houses to rent to prostitutes.

A few months ago he stepped on the starter of a utility truck, and a concealed bomb blew it up. The "Vice King," as Sydney newspapers called him, was dead within minutes.

Word quickly came out that Borg had left his money to the Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. It sent a big wreath to the Borg funeral.

Between Borg's death and the funeral, an inquest was held into the death of the woman known as his wife, Ann Borg, on Nov. 8 last. The coroner found she had taken 14 times the normal dose of sleeping pills.

Newspapers here said Borg and Ann had made wills leaving everything to each other, and had decided that if one died the other would leave the lot to help stray animals.

"A dog's a man's best friend," Borg was reported to have said some weeks before his death. "I don't trust human beings."

A report from Malta said Mrs. Lorenza Borg, who says she is Borg's legal wie, plans to claim the estate. The Australian tax department is looking into the situation.

CANADIAN EXPERT:

Dam Will Not Change Climate

MONTREAL (CP) — Dr. M. J. Dunbar, a Canadian Arctic expert, says the Russians are wrong in thinking a dam they have designed to span the Bering Strait would radically change the climate of the northern hemisphere.

Dr. Dunbar, former head of the Arctic Institute of North America here and now at McGill University, said in an interview Wednesday that "building the dam alone will not change the climate."

"And pumping water out of the Arctic Ocean to allow the warm Atlantic current in would take such a long time that the water being pumped in would cool and there would be no great change effected," he added.

Dr. Dunbar was commenting on an article by Russian scientist P. M. Borisov in the Soviet publication Priroda. The article has been translated into English by Russian specialist E. R. Hope of Canada's Defence Research Board.

The article contains Russian proposals for building a dam across the 50-mile Bering Strait. The articl esays the dam would make possible the pumping of cold Arctic water into the Pacific, permitting warmer Atlantic water to flow into the Arctic basin.

CLAIM RADICAL CHANGES

After three years Arctic sea ice would disappear, the article says. Temperatures in polar latitudes would rise 30 to 35 degreets. Permafrost would vanish. Tundra would become cattle-raising plains and Canadian winters would be warmer.

Dr. Dunbar said it is not the first time Russian engineers have proposed damming the Bering Strait.

"They had almost identical plans for such a dam in 1959. The only difference is that this time Borisov says it would take only three years to melt the Arctic ice."

Dr. Dunbar said the dam design may be sound from an engineering point of view "but I have talked to Russian meteorologists and they do not think it would work either."

He added:

"Even if it was possible to pump water quickly enough, a huge fog would be created over the area which would increase the precipitation of snow and increase the icecaps on Greenland and Canada's Arctic areas."

The Russian article states that the cloud created would increase rainfall in the northern hemisphere and consequently raise temperatures.

ART COMES EXPENSIVE

LONDON (UPI)—A painting the size of a postcard sold Wednesday for £46,000 ($110,400) at Sotheby's auction house. The portrait of a bearded man was signed and dated 1963 by Rembrandt. It measures only 6⅜ by 8¼ inches.

'Think of Human Waste'

TORONTO (CP) — More than 10,000 persons are in U.S. institutions for the mentally or chronically ill simply because they are blind, a U.S. health department official said Tuesday.

Joseph Hunt, commissioner of the department's rehabilitation services, said 10,000 was a conservative estimate of the number of blind persons committed because their relatives could not or did not want to look after them.

"Think of the human waste, the immorality of the situation," he told the American Association of Workers for the Blind convention.

Dr. Berthold Lowenfeld of San Francisco said the same situation probably applies to Canada.

He said the 10,000 estimate was low because he found 1,200 blind persons under 21 in state hospitals in California alone.

Dr. Lowenfeld, a research professor at the San Francisco state college, said the last epidemic of German measles in 1964-66 produced large numbers of deaf-blind children and another epidemic is expected in 1970 or 1971.

'FLOATING GIN PALACE'

LONDON—The $12 million "Floating Gin Palace," specially commissioned by former Ghanian President Nkrumah from a shipyard in Glasgow which no one wants to buy, has been accepted reluctantly by the government of Ghana.

The modifications are understood to have included a gold-plated bed and marble lavatories, but there is some dispute as to whether these were ever fitted.

Youths Demand Jobs

NEW YORK (CP) — Police charged into a group of 1,500 teen-age demonstrators in City Hall Park Tuesday after policemen were showered with bottles, rocks, and other missiles hurled by the youths. The teenagers, mostly Negro and Puerto Rican, milled about city hall, demanding 20,000 additional summer jobs in the city's poverty areas.

Miners 'Bottled' Wealth And Now He's Digging It Up

CUMBERLAND — The Chinese ghost town of Cumberland has become an active mining town since Harry Lewis, an ex-RCAF serviceman, began excavating for oriental relics.

Since the village site property was leased earlier this year from a Vancouver mining company, he has recovered hundreds of old Chinese bottles and crocks of all descriptions.

The best he is keeping for a museum he plans to establish in Parksville. The rest he sells.

BOTTLES, BOTTLES EVERWHERE
. . . part of treasure "mined" from town

Old bottles, depending on their age and coloring, fetch anywhere between $2 and $30 on the U.S. market. Antique pieces may bring in as much as $80.

The old village was established after J. W. McKay, a prospector, in 1952 slashed his way through a dense bush to discover coal near what was first Union and now the village of Cumberland.

Shortly after McKay's visit, the provincial government offered prospectors 100 acres of land for every $1,000 invested in the development of the coal field.

●

A small group of men arrived to organize the Union Co., and later the famous Dunsmuir family formed the Union Colliery Co., which later became Canadian Collieries.

The village sprung up when hundreds of settlers were brought in from China to help mine the coal.

The mine closed down in the 1920s, following an explosion, and the inhabitants, except for one Chinese couple, slowly moved out of the district.

The abandoned village in the past few years became a hunting ground for souvenir hunters, but Mr. Lewis has put a stop to that since he leased the property.

●

He does allow, however, people to dig at $2.50 per person.

Among the remaining old buildings still standing is a log cabin built in 1860 and occupied by Robert Dunsmuir.

The owners of the property may move the cabin to Vancouver for a mining museum, but Mr. Lewis hopes it will remain on Vancouver Island and become part of his museum project.

Six Convictions in Four Years

A man with a driving record described by Magistrate William Oster as "one so bad it's fortunately seldom run into" was sentenced Wednesday to three months in jail.

Court was told his driving record since 1964 showed one conviction for impaired driving, two convictions for driving under suspension, one conviction for failing to remain at the scene of an accident and a $300 fine for careless driving.

Motor vehicle records introduced in court showed Brumner's licence had been suspended in 1965. Police said the accused drove his car on the Trans-Canada Highway near Colwood Saturday.

Additional charges of careless driving, making a false statement and another charge of driving under suspension were dismissed.

Tricky Operation

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Doctors at Emory University Hospital said they successfully removed Wednesday a bullet from the heart of patrolman J. M. (Mike) Hatcher, shot while helping to prevent the bombing of a Meridian, Miss., home June 30.

FLOOD CONTROL

Ottawa Favors Series of Dikes

DUNCAN — Dredging of the Cowichan River as a flood control measure would be "catastrophic" to the fishing.

Director Herb Halliday made this report to Cowichan Regional District board Wednesday after meeting officals of the federal department of fisheries.

Mr. Halliday said department officials feel dredging would wipe out salmon spawning in the Cowichan for many years.

He said, "The department assured us it will do its best to have the dredging proposal turned down by the provincial government."

Mr. Halliday said that meanwhile his flood control committee will try to set up a September meeting with the provincial water rights branch which initiated the dredging proposal.

Indian Affairs Department officials will also be invited to the meeting.

Mr. Halliday said the federal fisheries department favors a program of setback diking and his committee will try to sell this idea to the water rights branch.

He said: "We will find out if they are working on any alternative flood control plans."

Mr. Halliday said the federal authorities are to make a statistical fishing study of the Cowichan River which should be completed by May next year.

He said such a study is costly and the department will not undertake it unless there is some firm indication the suggested flood control measure of diverting Cowichan Lake water to the Nitinat is to go ahead.

Provincial water rights branch engineers have said a Nitinat diversion scheme is out of the question because of exhorbitant costs.

Mr. Halliday said the suggested setback diking appeared to be the answer to the flood problem at the Duncan end of the river.

But he said a different plan would be required at Lake Cowichan village where the riverside area is built up residentially.

Two Sites Studied For Ambulance Use

DUNCAN — In its first major spending role, Cowichan Regional District board will have to spend about $45,000 for a new home for Duncan Kiwanis Ambulance Society.

The board Wednesday referred for committee consideration alternative sites on the Trans-Canada Highway and Canada Avenue.

Ald. James Saunders reported the former city works yard on Canada Avenue is available at $2,500 a lot — and the society would probably require three lots.

He said a former gas station lot at the corner of the Trans-Canada and Coronation would cost approximately $30,000 including a two-bay garage building.

Ald. Saunders said the building would require alterations and additions likely to cost upward to $10,000.

Ambulance society president George Siden said the main advantage of the highway site would be the quick access to calls.

He said 60 per cent of such calls are to the highway.

Stressing the need for new accommodation, Mr. Sinden said that in the present quarters the society last winter had to resort to the use of electric blankets to keep the ambulance stretchers warm.

Mr. Sinden said the ambulance drivers are willing to accept the responsibility for the upkeep of whichever building is accepted.

He said if the Canada Avenue site is chosen it will mean a new building.

ALBERNI VOTE RESULT ON MONDAY

PORT ALBERNI — Result of the judicial recount of ballots cast June 25 in Comox-Alberni constituency is expected to be announced Monday.

At the request of defeated Liberal candidate Richard Durante, Nanaimo county court Judge H. C. McKay was to begin the recount this morning. It is expected to require three days.

Mr. Durante lost the election by three votes to New Democrat Tom Barnett, who held the seat in the last House.

Mr. Hayward, 43, is presently city clerk of Revelstoke.

His appointment from 25 applicants was confirmed by the board Wednesday.

He takes over from Duncan city clerk Gordon Berry who has been acting in an interim capacity.

Hamilton Seen As Candidate For PC Post

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Alvin Hamilton, defeated Conservative member of Parliament from Saskatchewan is seen here as a strong candidate as next president of the Progressive Conservative Association.

Dalton Camp, the president of the association, has said he will not seek re-election. He has been defeated twice in bids to be elected a member of parliament.

When Mr. Camp steps down there will be an election to select a successor at the annual meeting of the Conservative association which could come this fall and will be held not later than the spring of 1969.

National Conservative leader Robert Stanfield told newsmen Wednesday that the choice for president was one to be made by the party's annual meeting. However he agreed that Mr. Hamilton would make "a most excellent" president.

Mr. Hamilton has proclaimed himself available for job offers now that he is no longer a member of Parliament. He has suggested he would be available in the capacity of a professional consultant.

NO SALARY

He has said he will wait in his suburban Rideau riverside home in Manotick outside Ottawa and "wait for the phone to ring." The post of president of the association has one drawback. It does not include a salary. It offers prestige and expenses only.

There is a possibilty that if Mr. Hamilton took it on a full time basis the Progressive Conservative association might consider a salary or fee.

New Authority

Police have been authorized to order a mechanical inspection of any car they suspect is unsafe.

Vehicle inspection becomes compulsory for all here Jan. 1 under legislation passed at the last session but the cabinet order means that police can require inspection in the meantime when they observe a car that appears unsafe or improperly equipped.

Maritime Seat Hinted For Camp

HALIFAX (CP) — The Chronicle-Herald says in a copyright story from Ottawa that Dalton Camp, president of the national Progressive Conservative Association, is exploring the prospects for winning a seat in Parliament in a New Brunswick constituency.

Failing that, the paper says, he may seek his party's New Brunswick leadership at a convention expected later this year. Richard Hatfield has been acting leader since the election defeat of Charles Van Horne last October.

Mr. Camp was defeated by a Liberal in Toronto's Don Valley riding in the June 25 federal election.

The resignation of J. Chester MacRae (PO-York-Sudbury) has been suggested to pave the way for Mr. Camp's entry in a byelection but Mr. McRae is described as not anxious to vacate his seat.

Probe of Health Insurance Firm Demanded

TORONTO (CP) — Morton Shulman (NDP-Toronto High Park) Wednesday demanded in the legislature that the registration of Allstate Insurance Co. to handle health insurance be taken away.

He also asked that the role of the superintendent of insurance, an officer in the department of financial and commercial affairs, be changed to make him a defender of the public against what he called "crooked practices" of insurance companies.

He read correspondence which he said showed Allstate had cancelled a health insurance policy for unacceptable reasons, misled a subscriber and "unlawfully" tried to backdate cancellation so that the subscriber making a claim actually appeared to owe the company money.

Leslie Rowntree, minister of the department, promised to make a personal investigation of cases mentioned by Dr. Shulman if the case histories were made available to him.

On the basis of "the alleged evidence" heard in the house he thought the cases had "the appearance of being unsatisfactory."

Police Plan Starts To Pacify Cyclists

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal police department has launched a plan to pacify the violence-riddled motorcycle fraternity in the city.

Constable John Dalzell, 22, has been assigned to establish a one-man liaison office between police and various motorcycle gangs and between the cyclists themselves.

Constable Dalzell started by acquainting himself with trouble spots in the city and eventually he will don a motorcycists outfit and ride a motorcycle.

His job will be to become familiar with the gangs' operations, mentality and hangouts and attempt to co-ordinate their activities.

Two of the four major club leaders have agreed to accept him in their midst and co-operate with him, a police spokesman said.

He said the plan was initiated to correct "undirected activity" of the clubs and make motorcycling more of a competitive sport.

Constable Dalzell said he believes gang members are trying to disassociate themselves from the "bad public image" portrayed through the mass media.

"I hope to make these clubs more attractive to the ordinary kid who may own a motorcycle and who wants to enjoy the sport in competition," he said.

Police estimate there are some 450-500 members in Montreal's four major motorcycle gangs and fear continuing bloodshed and rivalry among them.

ENRAGED SOVIET ENVOY

Icy Cool Briton Was Unflappable

LONDON (UPI) — Other men ran. The unflappable Sir Alexander Cadogan, who died Tuesday in his London home at 83, walked.

As chief civil servant, he kept the British foreign office running throughout the Second World War, blitz air raids and all. As ambassador to the infant United Nations, his icy cool enraged Russia's flappable Andrei Vyshinsky.

He kept a stiff upper lip in 1956 when Egypt nationalized the Suez Canal he was running. His ratings did not fall when commercial television challenged the British Broadcasting Corp. he was directing.

Other old boys of Eton and Oxford of his generation — the Anthony Edens and Harold Macmillans — made the policy decisions. But enacting the policy gave Cadogan his finest hours.

Companions described his trans-Atlantic airline flight when the door next to his seat blew off. Immaculate in striped trousers, black coat, furled umbrella between his knees, Cadogan turned up his collar and said softly: "Drafty in here."

Then there was that memorable walk to parliament.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, very unhappy, was standing in front of the government bench in the House of Commons late in 1938. He was making a speech he dreaded — telling the packed house that his efforts to appease Adolf Hitler had failed. It was a long speech and Chamberlain had not gotten to the point. Across Parliament Square, in the foreign office, Cadogan was at his desk. A message came from the ambassador in Berlin.

Cadogan glanced at his watch, put the message in his coat pocket, picked up his unbrella and homburg and moved toward parliament — walking, not running.

Across the square he walked, not dashing but with enough determination to attract photographers' attention. He walked into parliament, went up the stairs to the gallery and handed the note to Lord Halifax, who as a member of the House of Lords, could only watch Commons. Halifax, the foreign minister, glanced at the note and nodded.

Cadogan carried the note downstairs and it was passed to Chamberlain who was a few words from the key paragraph admitting his policy was bankrupt. The prime minister read the note.

Chamberlain threw away his prepared speech and told a cheering Commons that Hitler had agreed to meet him. The end result was the inglorious Munich agreement that threw the Czechs to the Nazis and did nothing to stop the Second World War.

On a back bench behind Chamberlain, Winston Churchill did not join in the cheering for appeasement. But Chamberlain was pleased with Cadogan's cool walk and said so.

Cadogan said nothing. Only later did he reveal his violent disagreement with the policy of his political master.

Canadian Tax Revenues Show Big Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Total revenues of all governments in Canada—federal, provincial and municipal—rose to $5,656,000,000 in the first three months of 1968, more than 11 per cent greater than in the same period last year.

Reporting on the national accounts, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics says that at this rate, this year's total tax take and other government income will reach $23,008,000,000, compared with last year's $21,326,000,000. This is an increase of nearly eight per cent.

The combined revenues of governments are more than 35 per cent of all the goods and services being produced in the country. The gross national product during the first quarter of 1968 was estimated by DBS to be running at an annual rate of $64,828,000,000.

The total of government revenues amounts to more than $1,115.27 for every man, woman and child in the country at the beginning of the year, whether working productively or not. This is $62.24 per capita more than last year.

ALLOW FOR PAYMENTS

On the annual rate basis, federal revenues in January, February and March ran to $9,136,000,000 a year after making allowance for the federal government's payments to provincial and municipal governments.

With these transfers, provincial and municipal revenues were running to $12,932,000,000 a year. The provinces and municipalities, therefore, have about $4 to spend or invest for every $3 available to the federal government—an important factor in the federal government's efforts to manage the economy.

In addition to these revenues by the three levels of government, the Canada Pension Plan fund is taking in $700,000,000 a year, and the Quebec Pension Plan another $240,000,000. These funds are available to the governments to use, but they pay interest on the money which turns up in the accounts again as investment income.

The largest increase in government revenues has been in receipts from personal direct taxes, up more than eight per cent. This was almost entirely in the federal sphere because of its inflation-dampening surtax on personal income taxes.

Some of the increase is also attributable to a slower rate of refund payments in the first quarter on over-paid income taxes. The federal revenue department ran into delays with its computer processing of 1967 income tax returns.

PROPERTY TAXES UP

Indirect tax revenues rose by four per cent, mainly at the provincial and municipal level. Property tax revenues were up by about 10 per cent.

On the expenditure side of the national accounts, federal outlays on goods and services in the first quarter were running at an annual rate of $4,616,000,000 compared with $4,259,000,000 in 1967. This was despite a cut in defence spending to $1,732,000,000 from $1,805,000,000.

Provincial and municipal outlays on goods and services have risen this year to an annual rate of $8,432,000,000 from $8,118,000,000 last year.

Pensions and other welfare payments by the three levels of government are running this year to $6,684,000,000, compared with $6,223,000,000 actually paid last year. And interest on the public debt of the three levels of government is amounting to $2,036,000,000 this year, compared with $1,982,000,000 in 1967.

Officers Arrested

ATHENS (UPI)—Government agents in a dawn raid Wednesday arrested three former high army officers who played leading roles in King Constantine's abortive coup against the Greek military regime last fall. They arrested former Lt.-Gen. Contantinos Peridis, Brig.-Gen. Ioannis Demestias and Col. Periclis Papathanassiou, authoritative sources said.

Arthur Mayse

A couple of evenings back, we ran into a small, familiar domestic crisis. No coffee for next morning, and no cream to put in it. So we scurried for a late-closing store on Richmond, and there in a box on the counter, I spotted some friends from long ago.

They were black licorice cigars, each tipped with tiny red candy-beads to simulate a glow. I bought one, along with a couple of caramels for my sweety. Then we headed for home, preoccupied each of us with what we used to know as cent candy.

The one-cent piece and its purchasing power are smaller than they were when we used to buy these unsubtle confections regularly. But the flavors haven't changed, and they turned the drive into a sentimental journey.

You didn't find cent candy in the big downtown stores; at least I don't remember ever buying it there. Perhaps the clerks didn't have time for the long wait, the slow, deliberate selection that such purchases entailed.

But the corner store proprietors did—the people who ran the neighborhood places with bells that jingled when you opened the door, and flypaper spirals dangling from their ceilings.

In retrospect, I am awed by their patience with the child who had one of more of those satisfyingly large coppers to spend.

They made time, as if they realized that here was an important, even solemn transaction.

★

Chocolate teddy-bears ... do you remember them?

They were as long as your forefinger, and the chocolate was a thin coating over a hard, clear-red body that was about as durable as candy can get.

If you hit a chocolate teddybear a fast, treacherous crack on the edge of the pavement, it might shatter. But who wanted to break one? Better to lick it small, then pouch the remainder in a cheek to last half a golden afternoon.

They, like the tiny imitation ice-cream cones with crisp marshmallow topping, the licorice whips and the big round jawbreakers, belong to the lost summers of a simpler world.

They were the sweets of infinite idleness; they went with sun-faded overalls, and running shoes that had lost their round ankle-caps and begun, just a little, to smell.

I tried a jawbreaker a while ago. It was smaller than the ones I have in mind, and at best an inferior shadow of those shiny black globes.

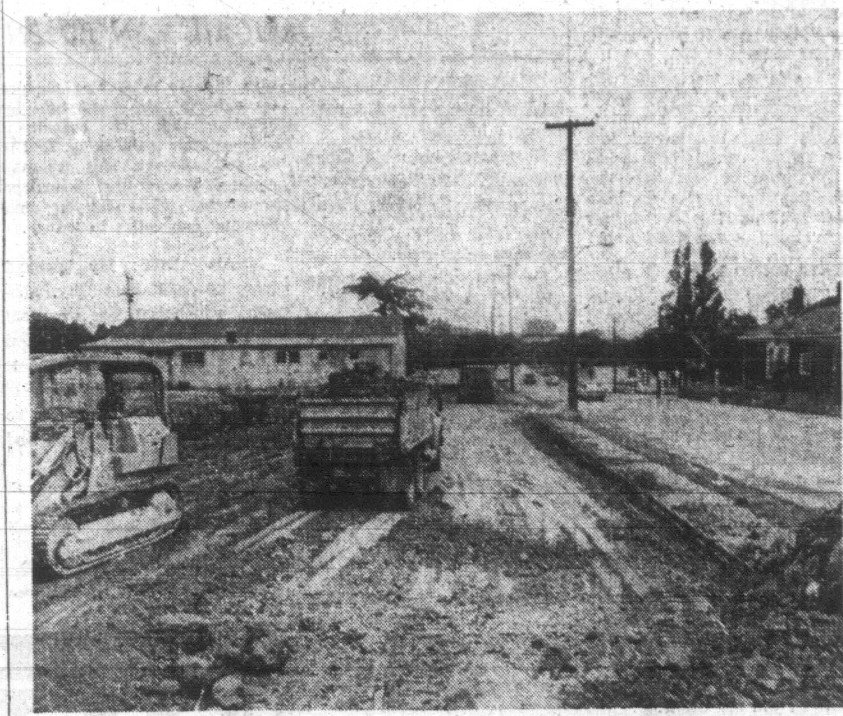
They were built in layers, and no jaw so mighty that it could shatter one. You worked them down, taking your time about it, until only a pea-sized ball remained. Then and only then did you crunch through the caraway seed at the centre.

The thing about cent-candy was that, in most of its forms, it lasted, and its taste lingered. In a moment of mad extravagance, you might choose a couple of toasted marshmallows or a thin rectangle of chocolate, but better to get a licorice plug with a metal badge pronged into its leathery front, or a strip of paper with sugary enchantments stuck down its generous length.

. Or maybe a stick of Pickaninny gum (and who today would so label a product?). Juvenile theory held that it was made of reclaimed bike tubes sparingly flavored; but if you got a black stick you won an entire pack. The black sticks were plentiful; once in that more innocent world, they kept me chewing all through a hot July.

Cent-candy, a misnomer now, still turns up in some of its varieties, but I'd like to find a dim little store that sold them all.

Hey! You remember "chloroform" lozenges, and marrowbones, and sawlogs, licorice whistles, and those yellow squashy peanut-shapes that helped sweeten the world when we were young?



CAREFULLY SKIRTING the Italian Community Hall at Rose and Kings city work crews are pushing ahead with the development of a six-lane highway destined to be one of the city's major traffic arteries. The hall, one of the last properties standing in the way of the road widening program, is scheduled for removal to another site within the next two weeks. The new highway will provide the western boundary for the Rose-Blanshard public housing complex on which construction is expected to start in the fall providing rental homes geared to income.

Stiff Penalties Face Ineligible Oak Bay Voters

Oak Bay returning officer Ken Murphy today warned non-residents of the riding caught voting in the July 15 provincial byelection are subject to stiff penalties even if they are on the voters' list.

He said there is a good chance anyone trying to vote in that manner would get away with it unless one of the polling clerks or scrutineers recognized him as a non-resident.

But he said he was certain that all three parties in the riding are advising ineligable voters to stay away on election day.

Penalties for summary conviction on the offence are a fine of not less than $200 or more than $400 and a jail term not exceeding one year "with or without hard labor."

NOT MOTIFIED

Mr. Murphy said many non-residents are on the voters' list because they did not notify the registrar of voters when they left the riding.

Enumerators have the authority to add names to the list when they find a new resident at an address but cannot remove the old names because the people may still be living elsewhere in the riding, he said.

Every dwelling in the riding is supposed to be visted prior to the election, he said, and many people who complain they were not enumerated simply weren't home on the several occasions the enumerator called, he said.

For new residents of the riding this would mean exclusion from the list but voters already on would stay on.

The returning officer pointed out that qualifications for voting include residence in the riding on election day.

Anyone enumerated and included on the list who then moved from the riding is not entitled to vote and is subject to the same tough penalties if caught doing so.

In a general election such person could vote in his former riding so long as he didn't vote in his new one as well.

Mr. Murphy said persons whose voting status is questioned by scutineers have the right to swear an oath that they are residents of the riding but would then also be liable for perjury charges if proved to be lying.

SIGN POLL BOOK

Voters' lists are corrected through signing of poll books by persons when they vote, and by watching death notices, but the system isn't infallible, Mr. Murphy said.

The basic responsibilty to get on — and off — voters' lists belongs to the voter, he said.

Other qualifcations for voting, besides residence in Oak Bay on July 15, are that voters must be at least 19 years of age, Canadian citziens, residents of Canada for 12 months and be in the province for six months.

88 Rabbits Left to Die In Cages

A story of 88 starving, thirsty rabbits, some dead in cages filled with manure, was brought out in court today in the case of a man charged with wilfully failing to provide for animals.

David Hanns, 7101 Puckle Road in Saanichton, was found guilty and fined $100. He was also fined $50 each on three charges of obtaining goods by false pretences.

Four Crown witnesses, including two SPCA inspectors, recalled in vivid language a visit they paid to the residence of the accused April 5.

HOUSE ABANDONED

Court was told the house was obviously abandoned and the rabbits left without food and water. When food and water were given to them they fought with each other to get it, the witnesses said.

Many of the dead rabbits were babies and most of the live animals weighed only half as much as they should one witness said.

In imposing sentence Magistrate William Ostler said he took a worse view of the animal neglect than he did of the charges for false pretences.

"Anyone with any humane feelings cannot help but be revolted by what happened," he said.

The accused escaped jail sentence as the magistrate said he was considering the public good. Court was told Hanns has a wife and child and a job waiting for him in Alberta.

Quebecers Coming Here On Exchange

Ten Victoria students will bring exchange partners from Quebec with them when they return from visiting that province July 20.

The 13th annual exchange organized by the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews has over 1,000 English-speaking high school students from 90 communities in nine provinces now visiting Quebec. It is the largest program yet.

French-speaking students in 62 Quebec communities are playing host in this annual exercise in bilingualism and multiculturism.

On Monday more than 2,000 of them will begin return visits to other parts of Canada.

In Quebec a number of organizations have provided recreation and special events, including the St. Jean Baptiste Society. A $20,000 grant from the citizenship branch of the Secretary of State has aided the program.

The Quebecers will visit homes where English is spoken but where the families represent a diversity of ethnic origins including German, Ukrainian, Polish, Latvians, Swedes as well as families who are Jewish, Negro and Indian.

BENEVOLENT BEINGS OVERHEAD

They're Winking Out Warning to Earthlings

By PAUL MUSGROVE

They're not flying saucers. They're starcraft. . . .

. . . They're friendly, and they see great changes coming on Earth.

This was the message in a delightful hodgepodge of galactic claims delivered at the Tally Ho Wednesday night by Mrs. Marianne Francis, "director and channel" of the Solar Light Centre in Southern Oregon.

A "channel," said Mrs. Francis, is a person in telepathic contact with the starmen.

The Solar Light Centre—publishing a quarterly magazine called "Starcraft"—is a kind of cosmic public relations organization attempting to bring mankind an awareness of the benevolent beings overhead.

During her talk, in which she addressed more than 100 Victorians, Mrs. Francis called earth "an isolationist in the system of planets."

'TEEM WITH LIFE'

She said planets "teem with life and interplanetary travel."

Spacemen from many areas inside and outside our solar system communicate with chosen earthlings via telepathy, physical means and a "tensor beam"—a device enabling the starman to speak, using a human's voice.

Mrs. Francis said she has been a channel for more than 10 years and knows several starmen well, although she has never met them physically.

At that point she answered her silent critics by saying:

"I know I do not imagine this. Much of my material has checked out with other channels."

MARIANNE FRANCIS

The most important thing, claimed Mrs. Francis, is not to question the means of transportation used by the star people but to listen to what they have to tell us.

'AT CROSSROADS'

The starmen have a fourfold warning for Earthlings;

- We are at a crossroads; peace and prosperity and interplanetary travel on one side, a nuclear holocaust on the other;
- Earth is moving into a region of "higher frequency vibrations" which will bring about changes in life as we know it;
- Geological changes in store include the rising and sinking of great masses of land, including the uplifting of ancient Lemuria, a continent supposedly lost beneath the sea ages ago; and
- Changes are coming in Earth people's consciousness.

Mrs. Francis said starmen will play a part in the great change.

If earth embarks on a nuclear war, the starmen will come and evacuate the "children of light" leaving destructive people to go their own way. During the change in consciousness, "believers" will go into the "golden age" while destructives will bring on the destruction of their own bodies.

STARMAN 'TALKS'

On behalf of the "Solar and Galactic Tribunals" Monca charged Earth capitalists and governments with suppressing knowledge of the space people for their own gain.

To that end she said your governments have several starcraft in their possession and are currently engaged in making dummies to fool the people of earth because knowledge of the free and limitless power available would cause a collapse in the monetary system.

There was a final word of caution . . .

Mrs. Francis said there is a race of beings "beyond the Constellation Orion" who are outside the controls of the Galactic councils and are not friendly.

Earthmen, beware.

Maui Racers Converging On Winds

The 2,300-mile Victoria to Maui, Hawaii, yacht race now hinges on which of the 14 boats reaches the trade winds first.

By Wednesday night all nine boats in the westerly group had turned south in an effort to work their way around the southern edge of the North Pacific high-pressure area.

Meanwhile, the southern group which had been sailing parallel to the coast, now is headed on a direct course for Hawaii and is quite close to the prevailing trade winds.

The groups are converging on each other and are expected to meet within the next day or so.

VELARIS HOLDS LEAD

Still in the lead is the Vancouver sloop Velaris sailed by Col Killam followed by his brother Bill in Porpoise III. Leading the southern group is Moonglow III skippered by Don Neilsen of Tacoma, Wash.

Velaris has now sailed 1,180 miles on a direct course and has 1,220 to go while Moonglow II has sailed 1,210 miles and has 1,240 to complete the course.

Suerte made Wednesday's best run, sailing 190 miles.

Reports received from the Laymore, the Esquimalt based naval auxiliary vessel escorting the fleet, indicate the first yacht should complete the course some time after noon July 17. This is based on an assumed run of 175 miles a day.

Courts Asked To Enforce Board Order

Men Not Rehired By Garbage Firm

The Supreme Court of British Columbia has been asked to settle a dispute between a private garbage collector in Saanich and the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Nearly two weeks ago, Loren MacNutt was ordered by the B.C. Labor Relations Board to reinstate seven employees who were illegally dismissed.

He was also ordered to "cease using coercion or intimidation of any kind that could reasonably have the effect of compelling or inducing any person to refrain from becoming or continuing to be a member of a trade union."

SEVEN FIRED

The board said it was satisfied that Mr. MacNutt, who handles garbage collection in Saanich under an agreement with the municipality, unlawfully refused to continue to employ and subsequently discharged seven employees who proposed to become union members.

A spokesman for the union said this morning that the 14-day deadline to comply with the Labor Relations Board order expired Wednesday.

"We have already filed our request with the registrar for the LRB requesting that the next step be taken," the spokesman said. "In other words the original order will now be filed with the registrar of the Supreme Court and is then enforceable as a judgment or order of that court."

BIDS EXPECTED FOR LABORATORY

The Capital Region Hospital District Board will hold a meeting "very soon" to decide whether a proposed $600,000 laboratory expansion at Jubilee Hospital will go to tender.

District Chairman Mayor Hugh Curtis today said he has received a letter from Health Minister Ralph Loffmark saying the government approves of a tender call on condition that the regional district does too.

Although there appears little doubt that a tender call would be approved, the district board will have to schedule a meeting to formally consider the matter.

Mr. Loffmark pointed out however that the government's approval does not commit it to approving a contract itself.

CONSIDER PRICE

He said the cabinet would have to consider the actual contract price before construction could be authorized.

Mayor Curtis said there already is $79,984 on hand for the project, part of the money donated by the Greater Victoria municipalities to help with hospital improvements after ratepayers rejected a hospital tax bylaw.

He said a federal grant of undisclosed size was expected towards the project as well as assistance from B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

OLD FORMULA

Since the project involves an expansion, the board has to determine whether BCHIS would pay 60 per cent of the total cost it gives towards new construction or whether it would only contribute under the old formula of 50 per cent.

Remainder of the cost, after senior government grants, would have to be borne by the district's ratepayers, he said.

Most of the laboratory expansion will involve an additonal fifth floor to the hospital's south wing but considerable plumbing and wiring work may force temporary closing of some facilites in the building during the construction period, expected to stretch over a year.

50 Men at Work Repairing Ship

About 50 Yarrows men are working in two shifts to repair extensive damage to the steering mechanism of the cargo ship World Harmony.

The World Harmony, owned by World Wide Shipping and registered in Hartlepool, England, was leaving Raymond, Oregon, with a load of logs for Japan when she struck a submerged object in the Willapa River turning basin.

Parts for the job were air-freighted to the ship and brought by her to Esquimalt.

The job, expected to take about five days, involves rebuilding the steering mechanism and straightening the rudder stock.

Growing Pressures, Drug Use Blamed

By JIM HUME

He was 19 years old, good looking, a brilliant student and apparently happy and well adjusted.

He tried to hang himself.

Today he lives in the twilight zone, his brain irrevocably damaged when the rope around his neck cut off essential supplies of blood and oxygen.

He is only one of an unknown number of British Columbia teen-agers who last year attempted to find the final solution to their growing problems in death by their own hand.

In Greater Victoria alone 31 youngsters between the ages of 15 and 19 years tried the suicide route with poisons ranging from overdoses of pain killing tablets to deep drinks of petroleum products.

"These are just the teen-age suicide attempts by poison," says Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer for the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health "They do not reflect a true picture because it is virtually impossible to maintain accurate records of all suicide attempts."

Rarely Report Cases to Police

Attempted sucide is an indictable offence under Canadian law but, as one local physician quite freely admits, doctors rarely report their cases to the police.

"It is true that most courts simply impose a suspended sentence, but even so I feel that any patient of mine who has been forced to make an attack on the sanctity of his own life needs counselling help, not an appearance in a public courtroom, however lenient and understanding that court may be."

"If all cases were reported, goodness knows how many there would be," says Dr. Whitbread.

A few weeks ago one Victoria doctor handled three teen-age suicide attempts in a five-day period. University exams were on, high school exams looming close.

"The pressure on the youngsters get fiercer every year," says Dr. Whitbread in partial explanation for the more than 100 per cent increase in teen-age suicide attempts in 1967.

"They are pushed by their parents, pushed by the schools, pushed by society. They are told, over and over again that unless they get a university degree they are some kind of failure.

"So they fail their entrance exams or, and this is possibly worse, they escape through and find that in university the pressure has increased.

'Almost Intolerable Pressures'

"I feel pretty sure that if only the people who should be at university were there, the campus population would be reduced by one third. Instead we have a good portion of our university students, who should really be in some other form of endeavor, living under almost intolerable pressures."

But Dr. Whitbread does not think that "pressure" is the only cause for the sharp upswing of teen-age suicide bids in 1967.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the extensive use of marijuana and LSD during 1967 is one of the prime reasons for the upswing," Dr. Whitbread said.

"It is all very well to try and argue that these drugs don't really do any harm, but anything that takes a person up to such a high peak is bound to subsequently drop him into deep depression.

"And I don't think anyone can argue against the fact that marijuana and LSD defintely disturb the powers of discernment and leave judgment blurred.

"Under those conditons it should not be really surprising that the attempted suicide rate is on the increase."

In British Columbia last year 67 people took their own lives. In Greater Victoria eight, seven females, one male, found their death wish.

The experts say those figures must be tripled or quadrupled for the attempted suicides. That multiplication appears extremely conservative if the Greater Victoria figures are used as an average base.

For the eight successful suicide bids in this area there were 119 unsuccessful attempts via poison. Once again, the experts warn, this is not the full nor true picture.

Many 'Not Really Serious'

Of the cases handled by the Poison Control Centre 31 were teen-agers, 47 between 20 and 39 years (with half of those barely out of their teens) and 41 over the age of 40.

"To be objective it should be stated that many of these attempts are not really serious attempts to take life," says Dr. Whitbread. "A good number of them are just dramatic attempts to attract attention. But even so, the cause for concern remains great.

"And the damage done, whether in a serious suicide attempt or in a move to demand attention, is alarming."

What happens when a massive overdose of a pain killing drug is taken but speedy medical attention saves the life involved?

What happens when a teen-age couple steals the family car and hooks a hose to an exhaust pipe spewing carbon monozide?

Tomorrow the Times will discuss the frightening aftermath of the suicide attempts that fail. None of the cases will be from the Victoria area, but all will be from official case histories recorded in Western Canada.

They will tell a sad story of young people who sought the long dark but found instead the grey half-light brought by permanent damage to the brain, the lungs, the kidneys and the bright spirit of youth.

Seriously Injured

A woman who received multiple injuries in a car accident shortly after noon today was only in fair condition at press time.

Rose Voor-Twordik, 512 Ridley, was involved in an accident which took place in Saanich.

Ask The Times

Q. What is the largest religious building ever built?—S.J.G.

A. The largest religious building ever constructed was the Angkor Wat—City Temple—in Cambodia, southeast Asia. It was built in the period 1113-1150 to the god Vishnu. Its curtain wall measures 1,400 by 1,400 yards and its population was at times 80,000 persons before it was abandoned in 1432.

Q. Are Canadians the world's heaviest beer drinkers?—L.P.

A. No. Of reporting countries the nation with the highest beer consumption per person is West Germany with 26.8 gallons in 1964. In the northern territories of Australia the annual per capita intake has been estimated as high as 52 gallons. A society for the prevention of alcoholism in Darwin, Australia, had to disband in 1966 for lack of support.

Penny Finds Jamming A Hot Summer Chore

By PENNY SAVER

One of my bigger summer beefs is jam. Not that I complain in the middle of winter when I can spread my own home-made jellies over slice after slice of hot toast. Right now, however, it seems a shame that the hot task of jamming must be done in the hottest season of the year. Already I have spent hours over the stove: Stirring jam that bubbles hot steam and sometimes spatters me with scalding syrup; hooking sterilized jars out of the oven; carrying the heavy pots of jam and pouring them ever-so-carefully into the prepared jars before adding the melted wax and a secure lid. I have hundreds of tiny scratches on my hands and arms gained while reaching deep into a maze of raspberry canes for the choicest berries and an aching back from all the work of jamming taken together. There must be an easier way.

I was overjoyed this year to find a real jelly bag to replace the one I have used for years. This jelly bag is made of an unbleached cotton cloth sewn into a bag shape with four grommet-reinforced holes around the edge. These slip over pegs on a tall chrome stand. The stand is over 12" in diameter at the bottom and will fit handily over a collecting bowl. The stand and bag together are $1.65 and the bags alone 60 cents. For those neophyte jam-makers who have never used one of these handy jam bags, they are for separating the pulp and seeds of the berries from the juice to obtain a clear juice which is then put through the familiar jamming cycle. I have never found a strainer that is fine enough to replace the cloth bag for this purpose as the tough wire, no matter how fine the mesh will tend to break the solid mash until it is fine enough to pass through, giving the jelly a coudy appearance. Also the cloth jam bag can be squeezed (when it is cool enough to touch) to get out that last little bit of juice.

Handy Funnel Stops Sticky Spills

Filling jars with jams or preserves can be a messy business. Hot jam is usually cooked in large, heavy pots which are hard to hold steady, especially for an out-of-practice, non-athletic housewife like myself. When all the jars are tucked away, there are little puddles of set jam — proof that the brew was a success but a nuisance to clean up. Preserves on the other hand, are solid and splash in their liquid, making syrupy pools on the table or floor. For 45 cents there is a handy aluminum device which solves this problem. It is a sort of funnel but one with a wide opening at the bottom to let preserves slip through. A handle on the side makes it easy to move from jar to jar, but watch it — the handle is aluminum too and will heat up from the hot liquid.

KNIT AND CHAT BY MAY MAC LEAN

Teen-Agers Love Instant Knits

Dear May: A friend of mine was visiting recently from the States. She was knitting with several strands of yarn and simply huge needles! Jumbo Jets they were called. She said it was possible to knit a sweater in just a few hours, and that these large needles would revolutionize knitting! Have you seen this type of knitting? Are there any patterns and knitting needles available here in Canada? Mrs. W. B., Montreal, P.Q.

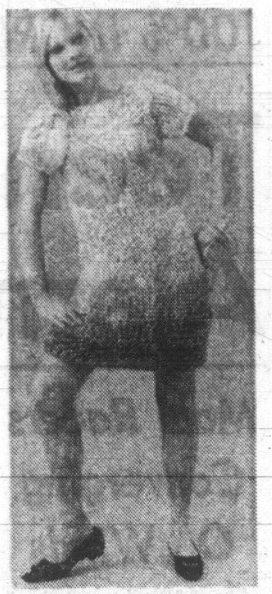
Mac Lean

Dear Mrs. W. B: Yes, I have seen this type of knitting, and since receiving your letter I have made several inquires regarding needles and patterns. The "Instant Knits" as they are promoted in the States are just beginning to be seen here in Canada.

HARD TO HOLD

Knitting with such large knitting needles seems rather odd at first, for they are extra large and take a little getting used to. But after a while you get the hang of how to hold them, I found. I had to hold them "over the top style," though each knitter has to work out her own best method of holding them, and the knitting does work up exceedingly quickly.

I can quite see where a sweater can be completed in a few hours. The stitches are huge . . . yes, but working with three or four strands of yarn, the stitches "fill-in" nicely, so that you have a bulky look without weight.



For a real "quickie" knit, try the pattern for this young-look dress which can be finished in 6½ hours. Patterns for this and other instant knits are contained in one booklet. (Ken Bell.)

The teen-agers have really caught onto the idea, as there are no complicated stitches involved. The designs are simple yet extremely smart, and just knit in plain and purl stitches. As a sweater or dress can be competed within a few hours, they are right in keeping with today's jet set!

PATTERNS AVAILABLE

Canadian yarn manufacturers are distributing needles and patterns for this type of knitting and they should be available in your local yarn shop. If you do have difficulty obtaining the needles, I'll try and help you if you care to write to me.

I was so fascinated with this type of knitting, that I was sure it would appeal to many of you that haven't knit for some considerable time, and those of you who like knitting that works up in a hurry. And it is fun to try something new and different!

KNIT ON PLANE

The dress illustrated can be made in about 6½ hours! Recently I did a promotion and literally knitted a very simlar dress while on a flight between Montreal and Vancouver — I even wore the dress off the plane!

Instructions for this dress and other "Instant Knits" are all contained in a small booklet which can be obtained by sending 35c in coin or money order, together with a long, self-addressed stamped (5c) envelope to: May E. Mac Lean, "KNIT AND CHAT," care of The Victoria Daily Times.

Please be sure to state the pattern you are ordering.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Advice Always Easier to Give

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a physician who has just passed his 50th birthday.

He tells all his male patients who reach 50 to "slow down." If they smoke, he orders them to quit or cut down, but HE'S a two-pack-a-day man.

He puts all his overweight patients on diets, but HE is considerably overweight himself, and can't stay on a diet for two days. He insists that daily exercise is a MUST, but HE doesn't exercise at all.

He says that an annual vacation away from one's daily work is essential to good health, but HE hasn't had a vacation in six years. And this will floor you. He wants all his patients to have a thorough check-up every year, but HE hasn't had one since he was in the service in the Second World War. What's wrong with him and how can I get through to him?

DOCTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: He's human. He finds advice much easier to give than to take. You can get through to him (maybe) by insisting that HE consult a colleague for a check-up. And if he refuses, ask him to keep paying those life insurance premiums, so you and your next husband can retire in luxury.

DEAR ABBY: My husband grew up in Kansas City, Missouri, which is where we spent the first 12 years of our married life. Then he got transferred to St. Louis. We still have lots of friends back in Kansas City, so we go there for weekends and vacations quite often.

My question: Should we call up our friends when we get to Kansas City or should they call us?

BETWIXT

DEAR BETWIXT: Call those you want to see.

FOR SPOCK SUPPORTERS

Mixed Reaction

By ELIZABETH BENNETT

Why was there a clothes-line strung with diapers at the corner of View and Douglas Wednesday noon? What were the women of Victoria trying to achieve by protesting the sentencing of Dr. Benjamin Spock after his sentence had been passed?

Are the women who gathered with their children and other demonstrators protesting against what they consider a wrong action, or are they supporting their favorite baby doctor?

Not one of the women questioned at yesterday's vigil said she was there because she had raised her children "according to Dr. Spock." Almost to a woman, they answered the question: "Why are you here?" by saying, "Because I believe the war is wrong."

Victoria's "Support Spock" demonstration, organized primarily by the Voice of Women, was one of many planned all over the North American continent.

The idea of the "We Support Spock" diaper clothes-line originated with Mrs. Davie Birmingham, provincial president of the Voice of Women. She has a similar clothes-line on the road at her home in Nanoose Bay. Said Mrs. Mavis De Girolamo, Victoria president of VOW: "I think it is a lovely, non-violent way to protest.

Do such demonstrations have any effect? One woman thinks they do. "When the French were fighting in Algeria there was enough protest that they were forced to end the war."

The vigil received a mixed reaction from passers-by. Many stopped to add their names to the petition in supporting Spock while others refused even to take the leaflets offered by the demonstrators.

A few stopped to talk to the young Canadian serviceman who stood opposite the vigil displaying a sign reading "Back The Boys In Vietnam."

The demonstrators didn't seem to mind their opposition. "I feel sorry for that boy," said one elderly woman. "I don't think he could have read or thought about his future. The war seems so far away from so many young people. They don't realize how much it affects them."

"I hope this protest will bring to the attention of the people of Greater Victoria that what is happening in the States and Vietnam today is of importance to them on this Island," added Mrs. B. L. Packford. "We are all part of the global village."

"Dr. Spock has always been concerned with taking care of babies," commented one woman. "They didn't put him in jail for that. Now he is trying to save the lives of the same babies and they put him in jail. I think that Dr. Spock is a very courageous man and so are all those associated with him."

"I know how oppressed they are in the States," was one reply. "I lived their for 60 years, including during the McCarthy era."

Would they feel differently toward the Vietnam war if it were being fought exclusively by volunteers? "It would make a difference," said some. Others thought the Vietnamese should be left to solve their own problems. Most emphasized that the United Nations should be an arbitrator in such matters. "If the war were fought by volunteers," said one elderly woman," there would be no war."

"I agree with Dr. Spock that in a war that is illegal and immoral it is not patriotic to fight for your country," said Mrs. Kathleen Grant.

"The trials at Nuremberg established that a man is responsible to his conscience, not his law. On that principle German soldiers were sentenced to death," said Mrs. Packford.

"I fail to see the distinction between this and the United States," she added.

One young man with a child on his back doubted if the arrest of Dr. Spock was against the principles of democracy, but he did feel the penalties were too severe. "The man in Baltimore who invaded a draft office and poured blood on the files received six years. If he had been charged with destroying public property he would have been fined about $75," he said.

The demonstrators included teen-agers, professional men and elderly men and women as well as the mothers with their children. Many also take part in the hour-long peace vigils which have been held in the same spot every Saturday for the past two years by the Victoria Citizens for Peace. The numbers Wednesday, however, were much larger.

"I have always wanted to join the vigils," said a teacher when asked why she was there, "but I never had the time before."

B MAUREEN DUFFUS

A mini-farm is an educational thing.

It proves, for instance, that a lot of Canadian school texts aren't telling the whole truth about this great agricultural land of ours.

The books are fond of the picture of the stalwart farmer astride $100,000 worth of combine harvester which sorts out hundreds of acres of nourishing crop to dump into the bulging grain elevators.

At the other extreme, they're also keen on the French Canadian habitant behind his ploughshare on his rocky field, trying to grow vegetables for his pea soup.

But somewhere between the mechanized and the primitive is the ingenious joker with a few acres of land, a crop of hay and no machines.

The man with the mini-farm likes to feel himself independent, and is stubbornly against accepting help offered by neighbors.

That is why one hot day the Duffus family transported two and a half tons of hay from field to barn in two station wagons.

Statistically, it has been proven that one father can get six bales of hay into the large car in the same time it takes one mother and one child to heave five bales into the smaller car.

Very interesting — but stupid.

One trip with the neighbor's tractor and hay wagon would have done it. Even so, it was a great step up the agricultural efficiency ladder from the first year we grew a hay crop.

That was indeed a deplorable example of how not to farm. We had the hay cut (not even a stubborn Duffus is going to scythe these days) but from then on Operation Hay Day was ours alone.

DEMOTED TO THE RAKE

So we mechanized the operation by hitching the antiquated rake to an ancient Nash convertible, which did neither of them any good. First I drove the car, but unsuccessfully, because it's hard to drive smoothly over a bumpy field while sneezing continuously.

Demoted to the rake, I sat high in the saddle, tripping the tines to make an interesting if uneven pattern around the field.

That was the year we got three tons of un-baled hay from field to barn in the Nash convertible, with the driver invisible under the mobile hay stack.

In succeeding years we have accepted help from neighbors who are mechanized to the point of tractor and hay wagon.

TREACHEROUS TRAIL

We would prefer to have all our hay mashed into bales, but the man who does this refuses to risk his valuable machinery on the treacherous trail to the lower field.

My job is to drive the tractor, an accomplishment of which I am rather proud, but which always brings out the worst in the pitchfork-wielders. Typical comments include:

"Are you driving with the brake on?"

(Sorry about that.)

"There is a throttle, you know."

(My goodness where? Oh, that. I'm afraid to use it.)

"Most people manage to let the clutch out gently."

(Can I help it if I sneeze a lot?)

"When are you going to take your driver's test, Mom?"

Meanwhile, back at the barn, people pitch the dusty hay off the wagon, and I'm supposed to pitch it to the back of the barn.

Ah-chooooo.

"Hay fever is no excuse, Mrs. D. Why are you letting it all pile up at the door?"

"Because I'm going up to the house to get you guys some lemonade, that's why."

Other handy excuses which don't work any better include "Wasn't that the phone?" or "I think I should put the children to bed."

The latter is a silly suggestion because the children like haying, and by then I'm too weak to fight about bed-time anyway.

So back to the field for another load, the children begging to be allowed on the tractor.

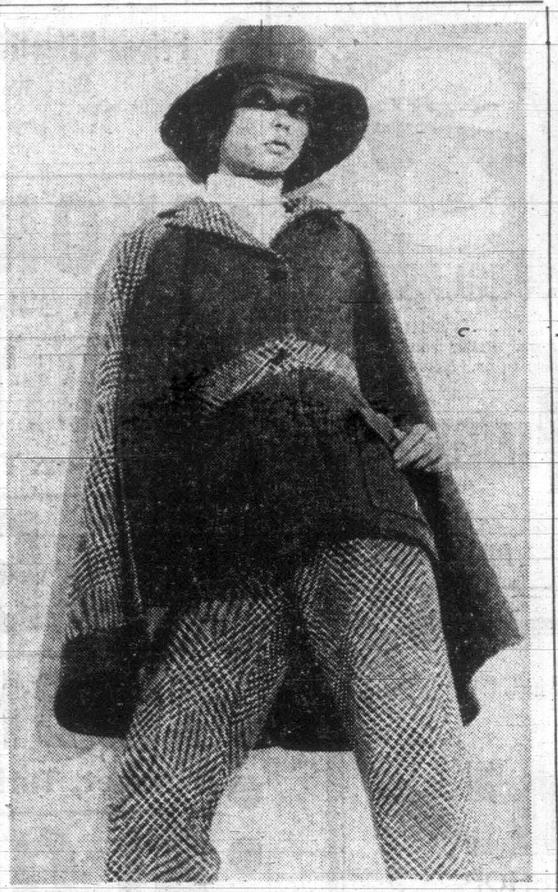
But there's one thing we have in common with those millionaire farmers on their mechanical monsters: The smug feeling of superiority when it rains the day AFTER the hay is in the barn.



A LOOK TOWARD WINTER

The long jacket and pants outfit will be a must next winter. The outfit shown here combines a sophisticated jacket with the practical fingertip cape. The inlaid waistband and wide lapels cut on the bias in a dark grey and blue Glen plaid, make a striking contrast to the dark grey pure wool Shetland of the jacket. The double face cape and long straight pants are also cut on the bias. This outfit is by Jacques Delahaye for Serge Perier. The wool felt hat is by Gelot of Paris.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Blessing of Summer Food

Lowman

Since many of the foods available in quantity in the summer are low in calories and high in food value, summer meals can provide the husband and wife an opportunity to lose a few pounds painlessly. It is important, however, to be aware of the caloric value of various foods so that one knows what to select and what to avoid.

There are many attractive fruits available during the summer months which will not zoom your calorie intake if eaten in moderate amounts. Some of the favorites include: cantaloupe, ½ of a 5-inch melon —58 calories; Strawberries, ½ cup — 28 calories; 1 peach — 35 calories; blueberries, ½ cup — 43 calories; cherries, ½ cup — 41 calories; seedless grapes, ½ cup — 48 calories; 1 large plum — 35-45 calories. Melon balls or berries make a pleasant dessert when topped with non-dairy low calorie whipped topping.

Seafoods have great food value and less calories than many meats. Four ounces of broiled whitefish has 90 calories while four ounces of cooked, ground, lean beef has 240 calories. Seafood is always an excellent food for the dieter. It is especially so in the summertime since it requires a comparatively short cooking time and is delicious when eaten cold. It takes only three to five minutes to poach scallops or to boil shrimp and only about ten minutes to poach most whitefish fillets such as flounder, sole, haddock or cod.

SEAFOOD DRESSING

Since most seafood tastes good cold, a simple dressing of lemon juice (4 calories a tbsp.), and fresh dill or parsley (2 calories per tbst., chopped), or capers (8 calories per tbsp.), or a little of each, may be all that is needed to provide a nutritious and appealing low calorie dish. It is important to remember that foods served cold often require more seasoning than do foods which are served hot.

Summer vegetables constitute another category of easy-to-prepare low-calorie summer foods. In fact many of these do not have to be cooked at all, for instance, vegetables such as cucumbers (peeled, 1 average — 30 calories), mushrooms (½ lb. — 60), Carrots (1 average — 20), tomatoes (1 average —33), celery (1 large stalk — 6), scallions (3 small — 11), red onions (1 average — 40) or radish (4 small — 7) and salad greens in general, including raw spinach. These may be used to surround a platter with a meat or fish salad mounded in the centre.

Halved, hard-boiled eggs seasoned with cracked pepper or celery salt are also an addition to such a platter (40 calories for half a large hard boiled egg). Raw vegetables may also be used as ingredients in the salads themselves.

Croquet and Tea

Annual garden party of the Dickens Fellowship, Victoria Chapter, will be held in the garden of Miss Olive Watherston, 637 Linden Avenue, Saturday at 2 p.m.

There will be croquet on the lawn, tea and cucumber sandwiches, a sing-song and the playing of Dickensian tape recordings by Norman Cribbens of the Victoria Times.

Victoria playwright Maurice Corbett will attend as president of the local group, with Miss Bessie Bailey secretary. Miss R. Moore and Mrs. Beatrice Beard will be in charge of catering.

High-Speed Project By Eastern Shipyard

LAUZON, Que. (CP) — Davie Shipbuilding Ltd. plans to give the Canadian shipbuilding industry a boost by showing that it can construct a hull for a $7,000,000 federal government search and rescue vessel within 15 days.

The keel for the 2,100-ton, 234-foot-long rescue ship was laid Wednesday at the company's yards in this shipbuilding centre across the St. Lawrence River from Quebec City.

Richard Lowery, the company president, described the undertaking as an exercise to prove to "ourselves and others" that Canadians are capable of high-speed construction of small vessels as well as of much larger ships.

In Halifax, an engineering division manager said Halifax Shipyards Ltd. can complete hulls of 200-foot vessels in 15 days.

John A. Marsters said in an interview that Halifax Shipyards Ltd. had "already constructed a number of fishing trawler hulls in this manner."

Several of the large Japanese and European yards can construct standard-type vessels on an assembly-line basis from components manufactured within 20 or 30 miles of the shipyards, Mr. Lowery said.

DESIGN NOT STANDARD

Mr. Lowery said employees at Japanese yards earn much lower wages than those paid in Canada, and the yards specialize in the construction of a particular type of ship.

Components and equipment are manufactured nearby and can be delivered on short notice.

Canadian shipbuilders, because of the small demand for components, must wait as long as a year for equipment such as engines or propellers to come from Britain, Sweden or some other European nation.

J. W. McGiffin, president of Canada Steamship Lines Ltd. of which Davie Shipbuilding is a wholly-owned subsidiary, said the "exercise" involving the rescue ship may prove to the Canadian government that it should do something about its shipbuilding policy.

SCATTERS CONTRACTS

The federal government awarded contracts to a number of shipbuilders across Canada when it needed several ships rather than having one shipyard handle the job more efficiently and therefore more economically, he said.

Because Canadian ship yards were given orders to build only one particular type of ship at a time, they could not specialize as the Japanese have in recent years.

The new ship's hull will be completed in 15 days but the vessel will not be put into service until next spring because of delays in the delivery of essential parts.

The ship was especially designed for search and rescue patrol duties and will have a speed of more than 18 knots and a cruising range of about 6,000 miles.

It will be capable of towing as well as rescue operation under the most extreme conditions of the Canadian sub-Arctic. A telescoping hanger to accomodate a helicopter is another feature.

Mountains Of Pakistan Next Stop

A graduate of Uvic, the 26-year-old Baptist school teacher leaves her home and family in Brentwood Bay Tuesday for a four-year stint as a French teacher at the Murree Christian School in Murree, which is near the Kashmiri border.

The school is operated mainly for the children of North American and Commonwealth missionaries working in Pakistan. Some Pakistani children attend also.

Miss Haugen will be tied to her academic duties during the school year, but in the holiday period, between December and Feburary, she will be free to work with Christian missions in the area.

She doesn't regard herself as a "cultural imperialist," and she blames such attitudes for some of the failings of earlier missionary expeditions in all parts of the world.

"Being a missionary isn't crossing an ocean, it's sharing Jesus Christ with others wherever you are."

The call to India came while Miss Haugen was spending a year in Norway learning the language and looking up old family ties. The Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship office in Canada received the request for a teacher in Murree and asked her if she wanted to go.

Youth Guilty On Two Counts

A man who pleaded guilty Wednesday to stealing a tape recorder, tapes, a reverberator and some beer will be sentenced July 18.

Hoshal, 20, also pleaded guilty to driving on Princess Street Wednesday while his licence was suspended and being a minor in possession of liquor.

A pre-sentence report is being prepared.

FIVE LEAP FROM FIRE INTO OFFICER'S ARMS

MILWAUKEE (AP)—A 160-pound policeman caught two men, two women and a child who jumped from a window in a burning second-floor apartment Wednesday.

Patrolman Leroy Waszak suffered a pulled leg tendon in making the final catch, but was released from hospital after treatment. The five jumpers were uninjured.

CLASSED AS ANTIQUE

WASHINGTON (AP)—The treasury department said Wednesday it has classified London Bridge as an antique which can be admitted to the United States duty free. The first section of the bridge arrived at Los Angeles last Friday and will be rebuilt at Lake Havasu City, Ariz. It is to be a tourist attraction.

Robt. Kennedy Staff Disperses; Special Projects Pursued

WASHINGTON (WP) — After weeks of grief and indecision, Robert Kennedy's political men are beginning to move.

Some of them are going back to politics. Larry O'Brien has joined up with Vice-President Humphrey. Dick Tuck, the elfish advance man, reportedly has offered his services to New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, a Republican.

Others are starting new careers or resuming old ones. Fred Dutton, Kennedy's de facto campaign manager, is practicing law again—in Washington, California and New York. Frank Mankiewicz, the late Senator's press secretary, is likely to sign on for special televison projects with either NBC or CBS. He may also write a monthly piece for the Atlantic magazine on the performance of the communications media.

The Ford Foundation has offered generous travel grants to various members of Kennedy's senate staff, including three of the young writers and intellectuals who were important influences on the senator's philosophical development — Peter Edelman, Adam Walinsky, and Tom Johnston. The grants will provide them with a year of leisure and freedom from financial concerns.

Johnston leaves this week for Europe and Edelman will follow soon after. He is to be married Sunday. Walinsky, however, will remain here through the fall to work with the Kennedy family on plans for a living memorial to the dead senator. After that, he, too, will go abroad.

K. Dun Gifford, who sought delegates for Kennedy, and Dick Drayne, the assistant press secretary for the campaign, have returned to their old jobs on the staff of Sen. Edward Kennedy, the last of the brothers.

Lewis Kaden, a brilliant young researcher on the late senator's staff, will spend the next couple of months finishing up a book with Theodore Kheel, the New York labor mediator. The subject: Mediation.

9 IN MEMORIAM

OSBORNE — In loving memory of Katie Elizabeth, passed away July 11th, 1967.

You cannot say, you must not say,
That she is dead. She is just away!
With a cheery smile
and a wave of the hand,
She has wandered into an unkown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since she lingers there;
So think of her faring on, as dear in the love of There as the love of Here,
Think of her still,
as the same, and say
She is not dead, she is just away.

—From her loving husband and family.

OSBORNE — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Katie Elizabeth, who passed away July 11, 1967.

When a mother breathes her last farewell
The stroke means more than tongue can tell.
The world seems quite another place

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

"Golly!" said East. "You wouldn't think anyone could make a slam against my hand."

"Blank, blank, blank!" said West. "They might well have gone down if you hadn't doubled."

Opening lead—♥ 10

We feel sorry for East and even sorrier for West. It is really bad luck to lose 2,020 points with as good a hand as East held. On the other hand, he had contributed at least 590 points to the loss when he doubled.

South's failure to use Blackwood should have told East that South was void of some suit and common sense should have told him that the void would be hearts. North had bid two hearts and East had five of them.

South ruffed the heart lead, cashed the black aces, led his nine of spades to dummy's 10 and thought things over. Should he take a club finesse? Without the double, he might well have done so.

Based on the double, South assumed that he would find East with the ace of diamonds. In that case, if East also held the queen, it would be better technique to try to ruff out the clubs. He led a club to his king and ruffed a club in dummy. Then he led a diamond from dummy. East played low and South finessed his jack. Since clubs had broken 4-2, he needed to find both the ace and queen of diamonds in the East hand.

He ruffed another club to establish his jack and led dummy's last diamond. East took his ace and South took the rest of the tricks, game, slam, rubber and everything else that wasn't nailed down.

SHAWNIGAN LAKE

The interesting older house can be a real fun house to live in with its huge living room and stone fireplace, a bedroom or den on the main floor, three more bedrooms upstairs, two modern bathrooms, and a wonderful kitchen with all the modern appliances included.

There is a large double garage, loads of blacktopped parking space for guests, and a neatly lawned, fenced area for the toddlers to play in.

The older youngsters will love to hike through the 1½ acres of woodland or take advantage of the 150 feet of waterfront with its deep water mooring.

And there's — aw heck, — just come and see it for yourself. It's on the sunny side of the West Arm on Renfrew Road just past the Shawnigan Inn.

Car Leaves Road; Sooke Man Injured

A Sooke man admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital after his car went down a 30-foot embankment Wednesday is in fair condition with cuts and a back injury today.

Sooke RCMP say a car driven west on Sooke Road by Kenneth Collins, 7007 Sooke Road left the road about 7:50 p.m. going over the bank. Cause of the accident is not known but roads were quite slippery at the time police say.

Collin's truck received about $500 damage in the mishap.

An earlier accident in Victoria at Wharf and Yates Streets Wednesday sent a man to hospital when the car he was driving south on Wharf hit a telephone pole at the intersection.

Raymond Moore, 2862 Wyndeatt, was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital with concussion and is in good condition today, officials report.

Dislikes U.S.; Canada, Too?

An American who told Magistrate William Ostler he came to Canada because he "didn't like the States" pleaded guilty Wednesday to obtaining lodgings by fraud.

William Blackwell, of St. Paul, Minnesota, was remanded to July 17 for sentence.

"Apparently you don't like Canada very much either or you wouldn't come here and commit criminal offences," said the magistrate.

'Tragedy to See Such a Record'

A Wilkinson Road inmate currently serving an 18-month sentence received in June was sentenced Wednesday to 27 months on each of seven charges involving uttering and false pretences.

Kenneth Moorehouse, 20, of Nanaimo, pleaded guilty to the offenses Tuesday. They involved sums of money totalling over $600 in various parts of the province.

In passing sentence Magistrate William Ostler warned Moorehouse to come to his senses before he became an habitual criminal.

"It's a tragedy to see a boy as young as you with such a heinious record.

"I only hope you can stop before you sentence yourself to a life of perpetual misery," he said.

The sentences will run concurrently.

YOUNG RADICAL FOUND SLAIN

EVREUX, France (AP) — "Jimmy le Katangais," leader of the self-styled soldier-of-fortune group that tried to impose "police powers" over Paris student revolutionaries, was found executed beside a beheaded sheep's body near here June 30, police reported Wednesday.

The body of the presumably French youth, with a bullet in the back of the neck, was discovered in a forest clearing by a mushroom hunter.

The significance of the beheaded sheep remained a mystery, but its presence suggested some sort of ceremonial assassination.

Police said they assumed that the victim, after having been routed from the Sorbonne, came to this town 55 miles northwest of Paris with a small group to restore his stocks of food and material.

An abandoned car that had been stolen from the Sorbonne area was found nearby.

The Katanga group, so-called because one of the leaders said he was a former "white mercenary" in the old Congo province of Katanga—was run out of the Sorbonne main building by other students late in the May revolution.

PLANT NOW FOR SPRING

Floral Experiment Pays Off

By HILDA BEASTALL

The home gardener has opportunity to develop ideas which are not economically sound enough to be put into practice by commercial growers. One that occurs to me now is the sowing of snapdragon seed new so that strong young plants will be starting to bloom the following year before May is out.

Hilda

The hazard that makes it impracticable commercially is that snaps are not reliably winter hardy in this area.

They are considered as annual bedding plants, but because of their slow growth while young we must sow the seed indoors by mid-January in order to have strong plants in bud by late May.

However, in many gardens on Southern Vancouver Island snapdragon plants will live through the winter quite well, and if prevented from wasting energy on setting seed the previous year, will give good results the second year.

We figure that a young healthy annual plant which has not previously borne flowers will produce its best flowers as its first crop. Therefore, if we have strong plants making their first buds during the cool weeks of spring, the results should be outstanding.

Snapdragons like what I call "cool sunshine." They do best when cool breezes temper summer days. The hot dry summer of 1958 resulted in complete absence of flowers on over 500 plants being grown for cut flowers. They refused to set any buds.

If the space had not been required in fall for another crop, the snaps would have been magnificent the following year providing they survived the winter.

Try sowing a few good seed now, set out the plants into a well prepared soil by late September, hope for a mild winter and see how fine a display you can get for next year.

Rag-Tags Replaced By COPS

MISSISSAUGA, Ont., (CP) — Last January 25 boys aged between 12 and 17 stood in front of John Kelly. They were a rag-tag bunch — one teenager in running shoes, another with hair like an English sheepdog, a gangly fellow with sideburns like those of Elvis Presley.

Five months later, it was a different scene.

Now there were 100 youths. Gone were the sideburns and long hair. The running shoes had been replaced by combat boots with a mirror-like shine. A shoulder flash on the khaki battle dress read Cadet Organization Police School — COPS for short.

Sergeant John Kelly, detached from regular police duty last year to set up a youth program in this Toronto-area community, had turned out a group of boys who took pride in an organization that was formed to counter the standard complaint of teenagers: We've got nothing to do.

STAND UP TO BELLOWS

By January, Sgt. Kelly had 25 boys interested. They lined up in a church auditorium while a crusty Canadian Forces sergeant-major conferred hastily with the policeman.

"If I get out there and bellow at them like I should I'll probably scare them right out of the building."

"Well," Sgt. Kelly replied, "if you do scare them right out of the building the idea is not going to work, so go right on out and bellow."

So the sergeant-major bellowed.

The boys stayed, and the strength of the corps has ballooned.

"We made it clear that our corps would be a semi-military cadet corps, that they would learn what we wanted to teach them, and the army was quite agreeable," said Sgt. Kelly.

With this understood, the army furnished uniforms.

DRILL WEEKLY

The boys receive weekly drill from members of the Metropolitan Toronto police department, the Port of Toronto police and a former Ontario hydro security officer.

They also attend weekly courses on some aspect of police work, including such topics as fingerprinting, police photography and law.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Douglas Feltner, aged 12, of London, Kentucky, for his question:

What exactly is millet?

Canadians have been called a corn-fed people. Indian corn, alias maize, is our basic cereal. It feeds the chickens and cattle that provide our meat and dairy products. Corn flour is used to make our tastiest breads and cakes. Corn oil is a basic cooking ingredient with dozens of uses. Corn is our basic cereal because this domesticated member of the grass family is a native New Worlder that happens to thrive in our climate. When it comes down to it, cereal is the basic item on many human diets. But our rich, golden corn refuses to thrive in many densely populated regions of the world.

People of warm, muddy regions depend on rice as their basic cereal. The cereal grain called millet likes a drier climate with either a warm or hot summer season. Its feathery crops thrive in parts of India and China, Africa and Russia. Altogether, millet is the basic cereal on the diet of one third of the world's human population. Its bird-seed grain feeds the chickens and its hay is fodder for the cattle. Its flour is rich in proteins and minerals, fats and vitamins. But it does not work with yeasts to make spongy doughs. Millet bread, though nourishing, is flat and rather heavy.

Bird Seed Crop

The basic cereals in the human diet are descended from weedy ancestors of the grass family of plants. Each in its own region has been cultivated for untold ages. As farmers selected the best seeds for planting, the cereals improved through countless generations. This selection of the best also produced varieties of the basic cereals. Canada cultivates dozens of varieties of corn for different purposes. There are also varieties of millet.

The average millet plant is a tall, straight tuft of leafy spikes arranged around several stalks that are crowded with clusters of tiny seeds. The crop is ready for harvesting after three months of the summery growing season. Most millet varieties are named for their bushy stalks of seeds. Ripe crops of broomcorn millet look like fields of little brushes. The foxtail millet, naturally, has bigger and bushier stalks of seeds. The finger millet waves tiny seed tufts like outstretched hands in the summer breezes. The common barnyard millet resembles its wild ancestors and might be mistaken for a field of grasses. The tall, thin seed spikes of the cattail millet can be grown in poor sandy soils where the climate is too hot and dry for the cultivation of any other cereal.

In Canada we have our golden corn and do not need to depend upon large crops of rice and millets. Fields of millet, however, are grown in certain warm summery regions of the United States. These small-scale millet crops provide all the bird seed we need for our feathered pets, plus hay for some of our cattle.

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Gavin Nicholson, age 8, of Ottawa, for his question:

A few weeks ago, a lot of young star-gazers had a chance to behold their very first eclipse of the moon. Many of them were surprised. They knew, naturally, that an eclipse hides the sun or the moon. This idea leads one to suppose that the sun or the moon disappears out of sight. Well, this notion is true and also untrue. It is true in a total eclipse of the sun. It is untrue in an eclipse of the moon. Naturally, there are reasons for this odd behavior. Eclipses happen when the sun, the moon and the earth line up in a straight row. The difference depends upon which of them is in the middle of the line.

When the moon is in the middle of the line-up, its solid body passes directly between us and the sun. From our vantage point on earth, we see the moon's dark, round globe pass over the beaming sun and completely hide its shining face. This is an eclipse of the sun. When the earth is in the middle of the line-up, we get an eclipse of the moon. But unless we are viewing the eclipse from somewhere near the sun, we cannot see the solid body of the earth hide the moon. We see only the shadow of the earth as it falls on the moon's golden face. The passing shadow of the earth just dims the bright full moon. As a rule, it tinges the yellow face with dim, dusky copper. This is why we can still see the shadowy face of the moon during the eclipse.

'Municipalities Circumscribed By Fixed Grant

Municipal governments in B.C. are shuffled out of the tax pot by the Socred government, Oak Bay by-election candidate Alan Cox argued Wednesday night.

At a coffee party in Saint George's Church hall, the Liberal candidate pinpointed provincial-municipal relations as a key weakness in the government's record.

Mr. Cox was a member of the Oak Bay municipal council for nine years and served two terms as reeve. He retired last fall saying people at the top must move out to make room for new people.

REVENUE FIXED

"Before 1953," Mr. Cox said, "municipalities received a fixed share of sales and motor vehicle taxes. Since then this revenue was replaced by fixed grants which at first were closely related to previous revenues.

"The grants have stayed fixed but sales tax and motor vehicle revenue have risen greatly."

The Liberal candidate called for much more provincial participation in sharing of costs for key public needs such as education, sewage systems and hospitals.

"The Socreds see the regional district as another way of avoiding financial responsibilities. The regional body is a good administrative vehicle they say.

"Sure, but we need gas to run it. The district concept won't work if its only meant to be another local fund-raising body.

The government has to accept the responsibility of setting priorities in terms of human needs. Then it must step in and provide a fair share of the money needed for public projects."

PROVIDES LAUGHS

The tall, read-headed Liberal had the audience chuckling as he poked fun at the Oak Bay Socred candidate, Peter Pollen.

"Although he is saturating us with advertising," said Mr. Cox, "he talks not about politics but simply throws out platitudes. He is against pollution, for motherhood and says sin is bad."

Turning from his tongue-in-cheek jabs the former Oak Bay reeve used pollution as an example of the government's failure to accept responsibilty.

"If elected," he said, "I'd urge pollution laws with teeth in them be passed on a province-wide basis. Backed by the provincial government, municipalities could ensure a clean, safe community."

Advance polls in the provincial byelection are open today, Friday and Saturday between 1 and 9 p.m. at the Oak Bay municipal hall.

LONG FOR HOME

Refugees Aid War Effort Of N. Vietnam

NONGKHAI, Thailand (Reuters)—Many of the thousands of North Vietnamese refugees who have been living in the northeastern provinces of Thailand for more than 20 years want to go home.

They feel their future in Thailand is uncertain, especially because the Thai government regards their attachment to North Vietnam as a source of Communist infiltration and subversion in the northeast.

The refugees, who fled across Laos to Thailand during the war between the French and Viet Minh forces from 1946 to 1954, now number about 30,000 in the northeastern Thai areas around Nongkhai, Udorn, Sakon Nakhon and Ubon.

They live under restrictions and pin their hopes of returning to North Vietnam on the success of current preliminary Vietnam peace talks in Paris between North Vietnam and the United States.

CONCERN FOR CHILDREN

Although the refugees are grateful to Thailand for granting them asylum, they are worried about the education of their children because there are no Vietnamese-language schools.

Volunteer teachers go from house to house to give lessons in Vietnamese to the refugee children.

The refugees are thrifty and hard-working and have become successful shoppers, mechanics, watch repairers and tailors.

An Indian merchant friendly with the refugees said much of the wealth the refugees accumulate leaves Thailand to help the cause of North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh.

He said many young refugee girls, noted for their striking beauty, work in brothels to earn money for the North Vietnamese war effort.

Talks Break Down

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Talks between representatives of 236 striking civic workers and the city broke down Tuesday with no progress reported. The workers, who seek a 9 per cent wage increase as recommended by a conciliation board report that was rejected by the city, have been on strike since June 21.

MEMBERS VOTE OVER WEEKEND

IWA Power Fight Blamed For Split on Settlement

By AB KENT

The coast forest industry's 26,000 workers begin voting this weekend on whether to accept a contract settlement package hammered out in six weeks of negotiation and passed by bargainers minutes before a strike deadline Wednesday.

Ballots are being prepared and among the first International Woodworkers of America members to go to the poll will be those of the Victoria local which has called a meeting for Sunday.

The 1,800 member local will hold a pre-vote rally in the Victoria Curling Club rink at 1 p.m.

Local vice-president Joe Fowler, in issuing the notice, said balloting will be done only at this meeting, not on job-sites.

Meanwhile factions within the IWA are apparently lining up — one side opposed to settlement on the terms worked out with Forest Industrial Relations, the other endorsing the memorandum of agreement as the best that could be worked out under the circumstances.

The conflict is a reappearance of the internal power struggle that occurred from years ago when regional president Jack Moore was challenged by Vancouver local president Syd Thompson.

Thompson and Duncan local president Weldon Jubenville were against recommending the settlement that would grant woodworkers a 36-cents-an-hour wage increase over two years.

Ten union representatives meeting with FIR on the contract were divided evenly until Moore cast the tie-breaking vote on signing the memorandum.

Moore called the proposal the "best or second best" agreement the industry had arrived at. A 40-cent wage increase was gained by woodworkers two years ago.

John Billings, president of FIR, said the agreement was "very costly." He drew attention to the fact it had come without government intervention.

'BEST PACKAGE'

"This settlement provides for a generous wage increase and one of the best vacation packages ever offered by any major employer group in Canada," he said.

"The industry, the union and the employees will now have to work together to absorb this very costly package."

It was on the issue of annual holidays and pay that the union split. The proposal calls for five weeks after 25 years' employment, four weeks after 15 and three weeks after four years, with pay calculated on gross earnings.

The 114 forest industry employees had refused to alter their position on holiday periods, but agreed to base holiday pay on gross rather than basic earnings.

WILDCATS ENDED

Spokesmen for FIR and the IWA said that as far as was known all wildcat walkouts that plagued a few operations as negotiations drew up to a climax had ended—with the possible exception of the northern tip of Vancouver Island or remote coastal mainland camps.

The IWA said ballots will be returnable July 31 for compiling. Results of the vote, which will be held at various times in the various locals, should be known Aug. 1.

Plenty of time is allowed for the ballotting to take place because of the remote areas to be covered.

POWERS FOR JUNTA

PAPADOPOULOS
. . . council in command

ATHENS (CP) — Greece's army-backed government published today a draft constitution that would drastically slash the powers of the king and Parliament.

The regime announced a referendum on the draft will be held Sept. 29 instead of Sept. 1, as originally planned.

Premier George Papadopoulos told a news conference the vote was postponed at the request of many groups and citizens.

Under current conditions political analysts assume the constitution will be approved by he estimated 5,000,000 Greeks eligible to vote on it. But there was no firm indication of how soon after the referendum the constitution would take effect and elections would be held.

The proposed new charter is a sweeping revisoin of a previous draft drawn up by a panel of jurists and other legal experts.

There is no provision in the draft giving the military any power over governments. Ostensibly the country would return to civilian control under the constitution. But then, as now, the real power would presumably be with the soldiers-turned-civilian who run the military and the country.

POWERS REDUCED

Any decison taken by a king would need approval by a national council of top leaders. A constitutional court would be empowered to dissolve any political party judged unacceptable for the nation's welfare.

Greece's previous constitution was discarded by he ruling junta after the military coup d'etat April 21, 1967.

Publication of the final draft was postponed several times in the last few weeks because of serious discord within the junta on the monarchy's future role.

The military rulers have not forgiven King Constantine because he did not support their coup and then tried to overthrow their regime with a counter-coup last December. When it failed, the royal family fled to Rome.

CAN'T NAME PREMIERS

The draft constitution removes the king's power to appoint and dismiss premiers, a source of frequent clashes between the royal house and the political parties in the past.

Instead, the political party that wins a majority in parliament would name the premier, and the members of his cabinet would not be drawn from parliament.

Parliament would be virtually powerless. Reduced to 150 deputies from 300 before the coup, it would be limtied to expressing judgment on minor legislation.

In an apparent concession to members of the regime that wanted the monarch to retain some rights, the constitution allows him to keep the title of commander-in-chief of the armed forces.

Russians Leaving Czechs Announce

The troops—estimated to number 3,000 to 5,000—had stayed on while the official Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda was charging for the first time that "counter-revolutionary" forces were active in the reform regime here. Soviet troops had smashed what the Kremlin called a "counter-revolution" in Hungary in 1956.

The government announcement said the troops would be gradually transferred "to the places of their permanent stationing outside this country."

At the same time, defence ministry spokesman Lt.-Col. Frantisek Kudrna was quoted as saying the Soviet withdrawal had been delayed after anti-Soviet leaflets had been circulated in Czechoslovakia which "aroused concern on the part of the Soviets."

"The Soviet troops wanted to leave, but the development of the internal political situation in this country—I mean the impact of the leaflets—delayed the departure which has become complicated," Kudrna stated in an interview with a Slovak daily. The interview apparently was given before the government learned of the Warsaw pact command's decision.

Workers Back Canada Union

GOLD RIVER (CP) — The Pulp and Paper Workers Union of Canada Wednesday won a representation vote over a rival pulp union at the Tahsis Co. mill near this Vancouver Island community.

The Canadian union polled 175 of the 279 votes cast, while the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers Union received 101.

The Canadian union already holds certifcation for the plant, but a vote was called for by the international union after signing up some members there.

VIENNA (AP) — Soviet police have released two American students they arrested at the Soviet-Polish border and accused of trying to smuggle old icons and anti-Soviet literature out of the Soviet Union, Stanford University's Austrian affiliate reported today. A university spokesman said the two young Californians, James, Howard Kratzer and Larry Robert Watson, had left Russia.

Walkout 'Likely' Next Week

(Times News Services)

Montreal union officials, preparing for a nationwide postal strike July 18, said today a conciliation board report dealing with the postal dispute contains no cash settlement proposals.

Marcel Perreault, Montreal local president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said he personally has not yet seen the report, but that he understands it deals primarily with working conditions and not with higher salaries.

"I don't believe the report will change anything about the date of the strike," he said.

The conciliation report has been given to union leaders but is not scheduled to be made public until Friday.

Other postal union spokesman across the country backed up the Montreal view that a strike was near-certain.

In Vancouver, union official Jim McCall said "we fully expect to go on strike next week."

He termed the conciliation report unacceptable.

MEANINGLESS

Without recommendations regarding salary scales the report is meaningless, he said.

In Victoria, strike headquarters have been established and picket duty lists prepared, according to Gerald Kenny, president of the Victoria local.

Mr. Kenny added, however, that he had not yet been informed of contents of the conciliation report and until it is made public comments by union leaders in Vancouver and Montreal are "a bit irresponsible."

DO SOMETHING

Prime Minister Trudeau said in Ottawa Wednesday night "something will have to be done" by the federal government if a postal strike is called.

He did not elaborate.

The prime minister indicated the government did not plan to intervene unless a strike is called. An emergency session to deal with a postal strike could be held anytime after July 25, the date election writs are returnable.

If the strike is called, it would be the second one in three years.

Montreal union leaders told 1,000 workers at a noisy meeting Wednesday night the strike could take place legally seven days after the three-man conciliation board's report was handed to the government Wednesday.

MIRACLE NEEDED

"We are headed for a strike and I think that only a miracle can stop it," said Mr. Perreault.

However, union spokesmen said the strike could be delayed if the Council of Postal Union Workers, in charge of arrangements for a walkout by 24,000 postal employees across Canada, so decides.

If the strike takes place, it will stop the flow of all mail except for that originating from social welfare agencies. Union officials said arrangements would be made to have the welfare mail distributed.

Mr. Perreaut called on the workers to continue their planned strike no matter what pressures are put on them and regardless of injunctions, special legislation or even imprisonment.

His call to continue the strike

Britain Pulling Out From Singapore Base

LONDON (AP) — Britain announced today it will hand over the major part of its naval base at Singapore to the island nation by the end of the year. Britain will keep the part of the base area where naval stores and administrative buildings are located.

A new white paper on defence policy, following an announcement in January of a plan to close gradually bases east of Suez by 1971, said redeployment would make Britain one of the most powerful military forces in Europe.

The Labor government also reiterated it will reinforce its garrison in Hong Kong, the crown colony on China's doorstep.

The white paper said 130 acres of the Singapore base, complete with dockyards, drydocks and other repair and storage installations will be released so the Singapore government can begin converting the facilities for commercial use.

This was the first announcement that Singapore would use the facilities commercially.

The transfer of the base this year is part of a program to help ease the adverse economic impact of the extensive reduction of British military forces east of Suez by 1971.

The British earlier this year announced they were assigning to NATO one entire division, a parachute brigade and a spceial air service regiment. These home-based units can be called upon by NATO for service in emergency. They are supported by RAF squadrons and a naval force.

The white paper listed the following new British contributions to NATO:

—From 1969 a squadron of Shackleton long-range maritime-reconnaissance aircraft will be transferred to Malta.

—From 1970 a guided missile destroyer will be added to Britain's frigate force in the Mediterranean. A commando ship will also be stationed there.

—From 1970 Rapier air defence units of the RAF will be switched to NATO. From 1971 Phantom-strike-planes bought from the United States will be at the disposal of the alliance.

The white paper stressed Britain's resolve to preserve its ability to rush to the help of any colony or Commonwealth partner any place in the world in case of military need.

U.S. CONGRESS GIVEN TRUDEAU 'HATE' TALES

WASHINGTON (AP)—Accusations about Prime Minister Trudeau's past, similar to those denounced as hate literature by all political parties during the Canadian election campaign, have been entered into the congressional record.

Representative John R. Rarick of Louisiana, saying Trudeau's election has "caused many Americans to inquire into his background," filed an article by the Canadian Intelligence Service of Flesherton, Ont., as publisher in the South African Observer. Also entered was a recent broadcast by Rev. S. J. Lyons, later reproduced in a number of publications.

Rarick, a right-wing Southern Democrat, said in introducing this "interesting background documentation" that the Trudeau victory led many Americans to "ponder what can be expected from the new leadership of our neighbor to the north."

TORRENTIAL RAINSTORM

6 Lost in U.K. Floods

LONDON (AP) — Torrential rain caused sudden floods through western and central England today. Six persons were dead or missing.

Troops, helicopters and army amphibious vehicels rescued hundreds as the downpour lightened to a drizzle.

More rain than normally falls in a month fell in a day, swelling rivers over their banks and sending up to six feet of water through low-lying towns. Officials said the storms were the worst in memory.

At least 39 major roads were closed. Trains to Bristol, Liverpool, Manchester and Birmingham were cancelled. The West Country was virtually cut off from the rest of England.

The pounding rain eased to a drizzle at dawn in most places, and the sun broke through in parts of the West Country, but more rain was predicted for later.

London escaped major flooding, but scores of motorists abandoned flooded cars Wednesday night and basements in some parts of the city were awash.

The worst hit areas were Devon and the Cornish Aiviera resorts regions in the southwest, crowded with stranded vacationers.

CBC CONSOLATION PRIZE FOR OAK BAY

By DON VIPOND

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation announced today an expense-paid trip to Singapore for the four boys from Oak Bay high school who last week emerged national champions on the Reach for the Top television quiz show.

Robert W. McGall, provincial director for the CBC, said in Vancouver that arrangements for the winning team's prize had been underway for several weeks but were not completed in time to be announced when the final rounds were taped last week.

The Oak Bay team will be offered the trip, probably this fall, although time and duration have not been decided. The prize will be sponsored by the CBC with the assistance of the youth travel and exchange program of the Department of the Secretary of State in Ottawa.

The student team of Chris Odgers, Bruce Izard, Robert McDougall and Jim Dempsey beat nine other teams on their way first to the provincial and then the national championship.

A furore developed over the weekend with word that the champs would not be included in a similar Canada-U.K. competition next month.

Initially the CBC said travel costs would be too high and this brought subsidy offers from Premier Bennett and Canadian Pacific Airlines.

The network then explained plans for the pilot project were too far advanced. It said finalists had been told earlier that the international competition had no connection with the Reach for the Top series.

Reg Jessop, CBC information officer in Vancouver, said today he did not know whether the prize being offered Oak Bay included team coach Glen Atkinson and spare team member John Duder.

Mr. McGall announced the Oak Bay team's visit to Singapore will be filmed for later viewing on television.

While in Singapore the CBC will hold discussions with Singapore broadcasting and education officials with a view to organizing an exchange of school teams to compete in an international student quiz series.

Melchers added ⅞ to 9¼. The company reported a substantial improvement in quaterly earnings Wednesday and approved by shareholders of a five-for-one stock split.

AT NEW YORK General Motors, up more than 2 points, showed the way for the rallying blue chips as a typical "summer rally" psychology prevailed.

Up around 2 or more points were Jones and Laughlin, Ford, Boeing, Standard Oil New Jersey, Lorillard, Johns-Manville, TWA and Chadbourn-Gotham.

Up a point or so were General Electric, Caterpillar, International Telephone, Du Pont, Standard Oil of Indiana and Standard Oil of California.

AT LONDON the British trade figures for June matched the expectations of the gilt-edged market, and prices made good headway on the market today. Gains were shown by many longer-dated issues.

Equities also brightened, but failed to sustain the improvement in active business later.

Lacking a lead from Wall Street, dollar stocks were inclined to ease, though one or two Canadians held quietly firm. Among these Hudson's Bay Oil, International Nickel and Noranda all added around one point, B.A. Oil and Imperial Oil, however, were dull spots.

AT VANCOUVER industrial issues continued their strong persues contionued their strong performance today but mines and oils lost a little steam after active first-hour trading.

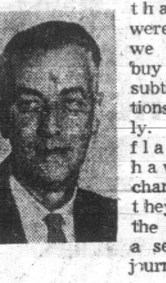
VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, JULY 11, 1968 —PAGE 19

Arthur Mayse

A couple of evenings back, we ran into a small, familiar domestic crisis. No coffee for next morning, and no cream to put in it. So we scurried for a late-closing store on Richmond, and there in a box on the counter, I spotted some friends from long ago.

They were black licorice cigars, each tipped with tiny red candy-beads to simulate a glow. I bought one, along with a couple of caramels for my sweety. Then we headed for home, preoccupied each of us with what we used to know as cent candy.



The one-cent piece and its purchasing power are smaller than they were when we used to buy these unsubtle confections regularly. But the flavors haven't changed, and they turned the drive into a sentimental journey.

You didn't find cent candy in the big downtown stores; at least I don't remember ever buying it there. Perhaps the clerks didn't have time for the long wait, the slow, deliberate selection that such purchases entailed.

But the corner store proprietors did—the people who ran the neighborhood places with bells that jingled when you opened the door, and flypaper spirals dangling from their ceilings.

In retrospect, I am awed by their patience with the child who had one of more of those satisfyingly large coppers to spend.

They made time, as if they realized that here was an important, even solemn transaction.

★

Chocolate teddy-bears ... do you remember them?

They were as long as your forefinger, and the chocolate was a thin coating over a hard, clear-red body that was about as durable as candy can get.

If you hit a chocolate teddybear a fast, treacherous crack on the edge of the pavement, it might shatter. But who wanted to break one? Better to lick it small, then pouch the remainder in a cheek to last half a golden afternoon.

They, like the tiny imitation ice-cream cones with crisp marshmallow topping, the licorice whips and the big round jawbreakers, belong to the lost summers of a simpler world.

They were the sweets of infinite idleness; they went with sun-faded overalls, and running shoes that had lost their round ankle-caps and begun, just a little, to smell.

I tried a jawbreaker a while ago. It was smaller than the ones I have in mind, and at best an inferior shadow of those shiny black globes.

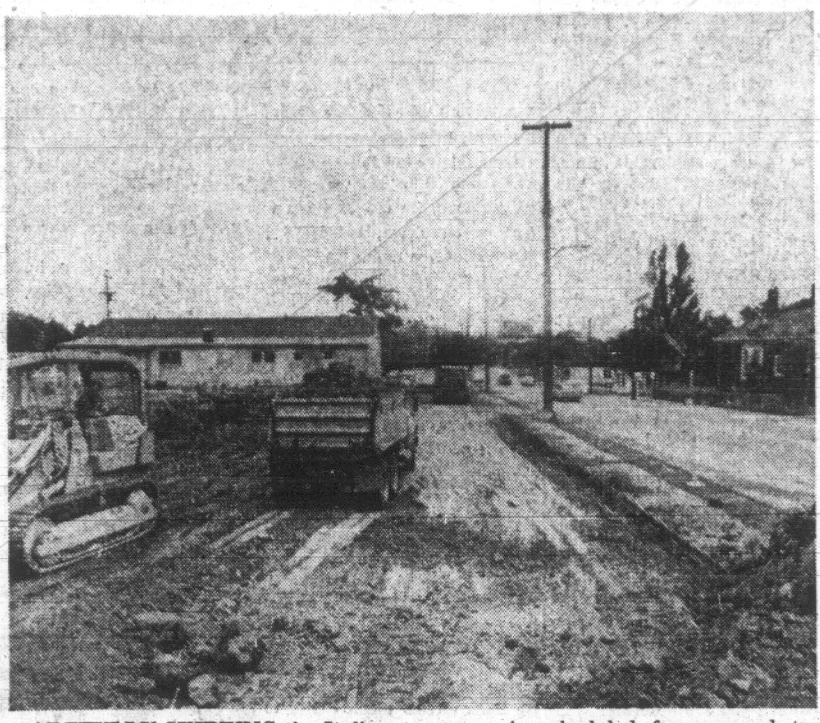
They were built in layers, and no jaw so mighty that it could shatter one. You worked them down, taking your time about it, until only a pea-sized ball remained. Then and only then did you crunch through the caraway seed at the centre.

The thing about cent-candy was that, in most of its forms, it lasted, and its taste lingered. In a moment of mad extravagance, you might choose a couple of toasted marshmallows or a thin rectangle of chocolate, but better to get a licorice plug with a metal badge pronged into its leathery front, or a strip of paper with sugary enchantments stuck down its generous length.

Or maybe a stick of Pickaninny gum (and who today would so label a product?). Juvenile theory held that it was made of reclaimed bike tubes sparingly flavored; but if you got a black stick you won an entire pack. The black sticks were plentiful; once in that more innocent world, they kept me chewing all through a hot July.

Cent-candy, a misnomer now, still turns up in some of its varieties, but I'd like to find a dim little store that sold them all.

Hey! You remember "chloroform" lozenges, and marrowbones, and sawlogs, licorice whistles, and those yellow squashy peanut-shapes that helped sweeten the world when we were young?



CAREFULLY SKIRTING the Italian Community Hall at Rose and Kings city work crews are pushing ahead with the development of a six-lane highway destined to be one of the city's major traffic arteries. The hall, one of the last properties standing in the way of the road widening program, is scheduled for removal to another site within the next two weeks. The new highway will provide the western boundary for the Rose-Blanshard public housing complex on which construction is expected to start in the fall providing rental homes geared to income.

Stiff Penalties Face Ineligible Oak Bay Voters

Oak Bay returning officer Ken Murphy today waned non-residents of the riding caught voting in the July 15 provincial byelection are subject to stiff penalties even if they are on the voters' list.

He said there is a good chance anyone trying to vote in that manner would get away with it unless one of the polling clerks or scrutineers recognized him as a non-resident.

But he said he was certain that all three parties in the riding are advising ineligable voters to stay away on election day.

Penalties for summary conviction on the offence are a fine of not less than $200 or more than $400 and a jail term not exceeding one year "with or without hard labor."

NOT MOTIFIED

Mr. Murphy said many non-residents are on the voters' list because they did not notify the registrar of voters when they left the ridng.

Enumerators have the authority to add names to the list when they find a new resident at an address but cannot remove the old names because the people may still be livng elsewhere in the riding, he said.

Every dwelling in the ridnig is supposed to be visted prior to the election, he said, and many people who complain they were not enumerated simply weren't home on the several occasions the enumerator called, he said.

For new residents of the riding this would mean exclusion from the list but voters already on would stay on.

The returning officer pointed out that qualifications for voting include residence in the riding on election day.

Anyone enumerated and included on the list who then moved from the riding is not entitled to vote and is subject to the same tough penalties if caught doing so.

In a general election such person could vote in his former riding so long as he didn't vote in his new one as well.

Mr. Murphy said persons whose voting status is questioned by scutineers have the right to swear an oath that they are residents of the riding but would then also be liable for perjury charges if proved to be lying.

SIGN POLL BOOK

Voters' lists are corrected through signing of poll books by persons when they vote, and by watching death notices, but the system isn't infallible, Mr. Murphy said.

The basic responsibilty to get on — and off — voters' lists belongs to the voter, he said.

Other qualifcations for voting, besides residence in Oak Bay on July 15, are that voters must be at least 19 years of age, Canadian citziens, residents of Canada for 12 months and be in the province for six months.

88 Rabbits Left to Die In Cages

A story of 88 starving, thirsty rabbits, some dead in cages filled with manure, was brought out in court today in the case of a man charged with wilfully failing to provide for animals.

David Hanns, 7101 Puckle Road in Saanichton, was found guilty and fined $100. He was also fined $50 each on three charges of obtaining goods by false pretences.

Four Crown witnesses, including two SPCA inspectors, recalled in vivid language a visit they paid to the residence of the accused April 15.

HOUSE ABANDONED

Court was told the house was obviously abandoned and the rabbits left without food and water. When food and water were given to them they fought with each other to get it, the witnesses said.

Many of the dead rabbits were babies and most of the live animals weighed only half as much as they should one witness said.

In imposing sentence Magistrate William Ostler said he took a worse view of the animal neglect than he did of the charges for false pretences.

"Anyone with any humane feelings cannot help but be revolted by what happened," he said.

The accused escaped jail sentence as the magistrate said he was considering the public good. Court was told Hanns has a wife and child and a job waiting for him in Alberta.

Quebecers Coming Here On Exchange

Ten Victoria students will bring exchange partners from Quebec with them when they return from visiting that province July 20.

The 13th annual exchange organized by the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews has over 1,000 English-speaking high school students from 90 communities in nine provinces now visiting Quebec. It is the largest program yet.

French-speaking students in 62 Quebec communities are playing host in this annual exercise in bilingualism and multiculturism.

On Monday more than 2,000 of them will begin return visits to other parts of Canada.

In Quebec a number of organizations have provided recreation and special events, including the St. Jean Baptiste Society. A $20,000 grant from the citizenship branch of the Secretary of State has aided the program.

The Quebecers will visit homes where English is spoken but where the families represent a diversity of ethnic origins including German, Ukrainian, Polish, Latvians, Swedes as well as families who are Jewish, Negro and Indian.

BENEVOLENT BEINGS OVERHEAD

By PAUL MUSGROVE

They're not flying saucers. They're starcraft. . . .

. . . They're friendly, and they see great changes coming on Earth.

This was the message in a delightful hodgepodge of galactic claims delivered at the Tally Ho Wednesday night by Mrs. Marianne Francis, "director and channel" of the Solar Light Centre in Southern Oregon.

A "channel," said Mrs. Francis, is a person in telepathic contact with the starmen.

The Solar Light Centre—publishing a quarterly magazine called "Starcraft"—is a kind of cosmic public relations organization attempting to bring mankind an awareness of the benevolent beings overhead.

During her talk, in which she addressed more than 100 Victorians, Mrs. Francis called earth "an isolationist in the system of planets."

'TEEM WITH LIFE'

She said planets "teem with life and interplanetary travel."

Spacemen from many areas inside and outside our solar system communicate with chosen earthlings via telepathy, physical means and a "tensor beam"—a device enabling the starman to speak, using a human's voice.

Mrs. Francis said she has been a channel for more than 10 years and knows several starmen well, although she has never met them physically.

At that point she answered her silent critics by saying:

"I know I do not imagine this. Much of my material has checked out with other channels."

MARIANNE FRANCIS

The most important thing, claimed Mrs. Francis, is not to question the means of transportation used by the star people but to listen to what they have to tell us.

'AT CROSSROADS'

The starmen have a fourfold warning for Earthlings:

- We are at a crossroads: peace and prosperity and interplanetary travel on one side, a nuclear holocaust on the other;
- Earth is moving into a region of "higher frequency vibrations" which will bring about changes in life as we know it;
- Geological changes in store include the rising and sinking of great masses of land, including the uplifting of ancient Lemuria, a continent supposedly lost beneath the sea ages ago; and
- Changes are coming in Earth people's consciousness.

Mrs. Francis said starmen will play a part in the great change.

If earth embarks on a nuclear war, the starmen will come and evacuate the "children of light" leaving destructive people to go their own way. During the change in consciousness, "believers" will go into the "golden age" while destructives will bring on the destruction of their own bodies.

STARMAN 'TALKS'

On behalf of the "Solar and Galactic Tribunals" Monca charged Earth capitalists and governments with suppressing knowledge of the space people for their own gain.

To that end she said your governments have several starcraft in their possession and are currently engaged in making dummies to fool the people of earth because knowledge of the free and limitless power available would cause a collapse in the monetary system.

There was a final word of caution . . .

Mrs. Francis said there is a race of beings "beyond the Constellation Orion" who are outside the controls of the Galactic councils and are not friendly.

Earthmen, beware.

Teen Suicide Rate Alarms Health Chief

By JIM HUME

He was 19 years old, good looking, a brilliant student and apparently happy and well adjusted.

He tried to hang himself.

Today he lives in the twilight zone, his brain irrevocably damaged when the rope around his neck cut off essential supplies of blood and oxygen.

He is only one of an unknown number of British Coumbia teen-agrs who last year attempted to find the final solution to their growing problems in death by their own hand.

In Greater Victoria alone 31 youngsters between the ages of 15 and 19 years tried the suicide route with poisons ranging from overdoses of pain killing tablets to deep drinks of petroleum products.

"These are just the teen-age suicide attempts by poison," says Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer for the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health "They do not reflect a true picture because it is virtually impossible to maintain accurate records of all suicide attempts."

Rarely Report Cases to Police

Attempted sucide is an indictable offence under Canadian law but, as one local physician quite freely admits, doctors rarely report their cases to the police.

"It is true that most courts simply impose a suspended sentence, but even so I feel that any patient of mine who has been forced to make an attack on the sanctity of his own life needs counselling help, not an appearance in a public courtroom, however lenient and understanding that court may be."

"If all cases were reported, goodness knows how many there would be," says Dr. Whitbread.

A few weeks ago one Victoria doctor handled three teen-age suicide attempts in a five-day period. University exams were on, high school exams looming close.

"The pressure on the youngsters get fiercer every year," says Dr. Whitbread in partial explanation for the more than 100 per cent increase in teen-age suicide attempts in 1967.

"They are pushed by their parents, pushed by the schools, pushed by society. They are told, over and over again that unless they get a university degree they are some kind of failure.

"So they fail their entrance exams or, and this is possibly worse, they scrape through and find that in university the pressure has increased.

'Almost Intolerable Pressures'

"I feel pretty sure that if only the people who should be at university were there, the campus population would be reduced by one third. Instead we have a good portion of our university students, who should really be in some other form of endeavor, living under almost intolerable pressures."

But Dr. Whitbread does not think that "pressure" is the only cause for the sharp upswing of teen-age suicide bids in 1967.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the extensive use of marijuana and LSD during 1967 is one of the prime reasons for the upswing," Dr. Whitbread said.

"It is all very well to try and argue that these drugs don't really do any harm, but anything that takes a person up to such a high peak is bound to subsequently drop him into deep depression.

"And I don't think anyone can argue against the fact that marijuana and LSD defintely disturb the powers of discernment and leave judgment blurred.

"Under those conditons it should not be really surprising that the attempted suicide rate is on the increase."

In British Columbia last year 67 people took their own lives. In Greater Victoria eight, seven females, one male, found their death wish.

The experts say those figures must be tripled or quadrupled for the attempted suicides. That multiplication appears extremely conservative if the Greater Victoria figures are used as an average base.

For the eight successful suicide bids in this area there were 119 unsuccessful attempts via poison. Once again, the experts warn, this is not the full nor true picture.

Many 'Not Really Serious'

Of the cases handled by the Poison Control Centre 31 were teen-agers, 47 between 20 and 39 years (with half of those barely out of their teens) and 41 over the age of 40.

"To be objective it should be stated that many of these attempts are not really serious attempts to take life," says Dr. Whitbread. "A good number of them are just dramatic attempts to attract attention. But even so, the cause for concern remains great.

"And the damage done, whether in a serious suicide attempt or in a move to demand attention, is alarming."

What happens when a massive overdose of a pain killing drug is taken but speedy medical attention saves the life involved?

What happens when a teen-age couple seals the family car and hooks a hose to an exhaust pipe spewing carbon monozide?

Tomorrow the Times will discuss the frightening aftermath of the suicide attempts that fail. None of the cases will be from the Victoria area, but all will be from official case histories recorded in Western Canada.

They will tell a sad story of young people who sought the long dark but found instead the grey half-light brought by permanent damage to the brain, the lungs, the kidneys and the bright spirit of youth.

Maui Racers Converging On Winds

The 2,300-mile Victoria to Maui, Hawaii, yacht race now hinges on which of the 14 boats reaches the trade winds first.

By Wednesday night all nine boats in the westerly group had turned south in an effort to work their way around the southern edge of the North Pacific high-pressure area.

Meanwhile, the southern group which had been sailing parallel to the coast, now is headed on a direct course for Hawaii and is quite close to the prevailing trade winds.

The groups are converging on each other and are expected to meet within the next day or so.

VELARIS HOLDS LEAD

Still in the lead is the Vancouver sloop Velaris sailed by Col Killam followed by his brother Bill in Porpoise III. Leading the southern group is Moonglow III skippered by Don Neilsen of Tacoma, Wash.

Velaris has now sailed 1,180 miles on a direct course and has 1,220 to go while Moonglow II has sailed 1,210 miles and has 1,240 to complete the course.

Suerte made Wednesday's best run, sailing 190 miles.

Reports received from the Laymore, the Esquimalt based naval auxiliary vessel escorting the fleet, indicate the first yacht should complete the course some time after noon July 17. This is based on an assumed run of 175 miles a day.

Courts Asked To Enforce Board Order

Men Not Rehired By Garbage Firm

The Supreme Court of British Columbia has been asked to settle a dispute between a private garbage collector in Saanich and the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Nearly two weeks ago, Loren MacNutt was ordered by the B.C. Labor Relations Board to reinstate seven employees who were illegally dismissed.

He was also ordered to "cease using coercion or intimidation of any kind that could reasonably have the effect of compelling or inducing any person to refrain from becoming or continuing to be a member of a trade union."

SEVEN FIRED

The board said it was satisfied that Mr. MacNutt, who handles garbage collection in Saanich under an agreement with the municipality, unlawfully refused to continue to employ and subsequently discharged seven employees who proposed to become union members.

A spokesman for the union said this morning that the 14-day deadline to comply with the Labor Relations Board order expired Wednesday.

"We have already filed our request with the registrar for the LRB requesting that the next step be taken," the spokesman said. "In other words the original order will now be filed with the registrar of the Supreme Court and is then enforceable as a judgment or order of that court."

BIDS EXPECTED FOR LABORATORY

The Capital Region Hospital District Board will hold a meeting "very soon" to decide whether a proposed $600,000 laboratory expansion at Jubilee Hospital will go to tender.

District Chairman Mayor Hugh Curtis today said he has received a letter from Health Minister Ralph Loffmark saying the government approves of a tender call on condition that the regional district does too.

Although there appears little doubt that a tender call would be approved, the district board will have to schedule a meeting to formally consider the matter.

Mr. Loffmark pointed out however that the government's approval does not commit it to approving a contract itself.

CONSIDER PRICE

He said the cabinet would have to consider the actual contract price before construction could be authorized.

Mayor Curtis said there already is $79,984 on hand for the project, part of the money donated by the Greater Victoria municipalities to help with hospital improvements after ratepayers rejected a hospital tax bylaw.

He said a federal grant of undisclosed size was expected towards the project as well as assistance from B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

OLD FORMULA

Since the project involves an expansion, the board has to determine whether BCHIS would pay 60 per cent of the total cost it gives towards new construction or whether it would only contribute under the old formula of 50 per cent.

Remainder of the cost, after senior government grants, would have to be borne by the district's ratepayers, he said.

Most of the laboratory expansion will involve an additonal fifth floor to the hospital's south wing but considerable plumbing and wiring work may force temporary closing of some facilites in the building during the construction period, expected to stretch over a year.

50 Men at Work Repairing Ship

About 50 Yarrows men are working in two shifts to repair extensive damage to the steering mechanism of the cargo ship World Harmony.

The World Harmony, owned by World Wide Shipping and registered in Hartlepool, England, was leaving Raymond, Oregon, with a load of logs for Japan when she struck a submerged object in the Willapa River turning basin.

Parts for the job were air-freighted to the ship and brought by her to Esquimalt.

The job, expected to take about five days, involves rebuilding the steering mechanism and straightening the rudder stock.

Seriously Injured

Rose Voor-Twordik, 512 Ridley, was involved in an accident which took place in Saanich.

Ask The Times

Q. What is the largest religious building ever built?—S.J.G.

A. The largest religious building ever constructed was the Angkor Wat—City Temple—in Cambodia, southeast Asia. It was built in the period 1113-1150 to the god Vishnu. Its curtain wall measures 1,400 by 1,400 yards and its population was at times 80,000 persons before it was abandoned in 1432.

Q. Are Canadians the world's heaviest beer drinkers?—L.P.

A. No. Of reporting countries the nation with the highest beer consumption per person is West Germany with 26.3 gallons in 1964. In the northern territories of Australia the annual per capita intake has been estimated as high as 52 gallons. A society for the prevention of alcoholism in Darwin, Australia, had to disband in 1966 for lack of support.

Postmen See Strike As Report Attacked

Walkout 'Likely' Next Week

(Times News Services)

Montreal union officials, preparing for a nationwide postal strike July 18, said today a conciliation board report dealing with the postal dispute contains no cash settlement proposals.

Marcel Perreault, Montreal local president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said he personally has not yet seen the report, but that he understands it deals primarily with working conditions and not with higher salaries.

"I don't believe the report will change anything about the date of the strike," he said.

The conciliation report has been given to union leaders but is not scheduled to be made public until Friday.

Other postal union spokesmen across the country backed up the Montreal view that a strike was near-certain.

In Vancouver, union official Jim McCall said "we fully expect to go on strike next week."

He termed the conciliation report unacceptable.

MEANINGLESS

Without recommendations regarding salary scales the report is meaningless, he said.

In Victoria, strike headquarters have been established and picket duty lists prepared, according to Gerald Kenny, president of the Victoria local.

Mr. Kenny added, however, that he had not yet been informed of contents of the conciliation report and until it is made public comments by union leaders in Vancouver and Montreal are "a bit irresponsible."

DO SOMETHING

Prime Minister Trudeau said in Ottawa Wednesday night "something will have to be done" by the federal government if a postal strike is called.

He did not elaborate.

The prime minister indicated the government did not plan to intervene unless a strike is called. An emergency session to deal with a postal strike could be held anytime after July 25, the date election writs are returnable.

If the strike is called, it would be the second one in three years.

Montreal union leaders told 1,000 workers at a noisy meeting Wednesday night the strike could take place legally seven days after the three-man conciliation board's report was handed to the government Wednesday.

MIRACLE NEEDED

"We are headed for a strike and I think that only a miracle can stop it," said Mr. Perreault.

However, union spokesmen said the strike could be delayed if the Council of Postal Union Workers, in charge of arrangements for a walkout by 24,000 postal employees across Canada, so decides.

If the strike takes place, it will stop the flow of all mail except for that originating from social welfare agencies. Union officials said arrangements would be made to have the welfare mail distributed.

Mr. Perreaut called on the workers to continue their planned strike no matter what pressures are put on them and regardless of injunctions, special legislation or even imprisonment.

His call to continue the strike

MEMBERS VOTE OVER WEEKEND

IWA Power Fight Blamed For Split on Settlement

By AB KENT

The coast forest industry's 26,000 workers begin voting this weekend on whether to accept a contract settlement package hammered out in six weeks of negotiation and passed by bargainers minutes before a strike deadline Wednesday.

Ballots are being prepared and among the first International Woodworkers of America members to go to the poll will be those of the Victoria local which has called a meeting for Sunday.

The 1,800 member local will hold a pre-vote rally in the Victoria Curling Club rink at 1 p.m.

Local vice-president Joe Fowler, in issuing the notice, said balloting will be done only at this meeting, not on job-sites.

Meanwhile factions within the IWA are apparently lining up — one side opposed to settlement on the terms worked out with Forest Industrial Relations, the other endorsing the memorandum of agreement as the best that could be worked out under the circumstances.

The conflict is a reappearance of the internal power struggle that occurred from years ago when regional president Jack Moore was challenged by Vancouver local president Syd Thompson.

Thompson and Duncan local president Weldon Jubenville were against recommending the settlement that would grant woodworkers a 36-cents-an-hour wage increase over two years.

Moore called the proposal the "best or second best" agreement the industry had arrived at. A 40-cent wage increase was gained by woodworkers two years ago.

John Billings, president of FIR, said the agreement was "very costly." He drew attention to the fact it had come without government intervention.

'BEST PACKAGE'

"This settlement provides for a generous wage increase and one of the best vacation packages ever offered by any major employer group in Canada," he said.

"The industry, the union and the employees will now have to work together to absorb this very costly package."

It was on the issue of annual holidays and pay that the union split. The proposal calls for five weeks after 25 years' employment, four weeks after 15 and three weeks after four years, with pay calculated on gross earnings.

The 114 forest industry employees had refused to alter their position on holiday periods, but agreed to base holiday pay on gross rather than basic earnings.

WILDCATS ENDED

Spokesmen for EIR and the IWA said that as far as was known all wildcat walkouts that plagued a few operations as negotiations drew up to a climax had ended—with the possible exception of the northern tip of Vancouver Island or remote coastal mainland camps.

The IWA said ballots will be returnable July 31 for compiling. Results of the vote, which will be held at various times in the various locals, should be known Aug. 1.

Plenty of time is allowed for the ballotting to take place because of the remote areas to be covered.

POWERS FOR JUNTA

PAPADOPOULOS
... council in command

ATHENS (CP) — Greece's army-backed government published today a draft constitution that would drastically slash the powers of the king and Parliament.

The regime announced a referendum on the draft will be held Sept. 29 instead of Sept. 1, as originally planned.

Premier George Papadopoulos told a news conference the vote was postponed at the request of many groups and citizens.

Under current conditions political analysts assume the consituation will be approved by the estimated 5,000,000 Greeks eligble to vote on it. But there was no firm indication of how soon after the referendum the constitution would take effect and elections would be held.

The proposed new charter is a sweeping revision of a previous draft drawn up by a panel of jurists and other legal experts.

There is no provision in the draft giving the military any power over governments. Ostensibly the country would return to civilian control under the constitution. But then, as now, the real power would presumably be with the soldiers-turned-civilians who run the military and the country.

POWERS REDUCED

Any decison taken by a king would need approval by a national council of top leaders. A constitutional court would be empowered to dissolve any political party judged unacceptable for the nation's welfare.

Greece's previous constitution was discarded by the ruling junta after the military coup d'etat April 21, 1967.

Publication of the final draft was postponed several times in the last few weeks because of serious discord within the junta on the monarchy's future role.

The military rulers have not forgiven King Constantine because he did not support their coup and then tried to overthrow their regime with a counter-coup last December. When it failed, the royal family fled to Rome.

CAN'T NAME PREMIERS

The draft constitution removes the king's power to appoint and dismiss premiers, a source of frequent clashes between the royal house and the political parties in the past.

Instead, the political party that wins a majority in parliament would name the premier, and the members of his cabinet would not be drawn from parliament.

Parliament would be virtually powerless. Reduced to 150 deputies from 300 before the coup, it would be limited to expressing judgment on minor legislation.

In an apparent concession to members of the regime that wanted the monarch to retain some rights, the constitution allows him to keep the title of commander-in-chief of the armed forces.

Russians Leaving Czechs Announce

The troops—estimated to number 3,000 to 5,000—had stayed on while the official Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda was charging for the first time that "counter-revolutionary" forces were active in the reform regime here. Soviet troops had smashed what the Kremlin called a "counter-revolution" in Hungary in 1956.

The government announcement said the troops would be gradually transferred "to the places of their permanent stationing outside this country."

At the same time, defence ministry spokesman Lt.-Col. Frantisek Kudrna was quoted as saying the Soviet withdrawal had been delayed after anti-Soviet leaflets had been circulated in Czechoslovakia which "aroused concern on the part of the Soviets."

"The Soviet troops wanted to leave, but the development of the internal political situation in this country—I mean the impact of the leaflets—delayed the departure which has become complicated," Kudrna stated in an interview with a Slovak daily. The interview apparently was given before the government learned of the Warsaw pact command's decision.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A London-based Pacific Western Airlines pilot who flew to Africa to find possible landing sites for Red Cross mercy flights into Biafra was refused entry into that war-ravaged country, it was disclosed here today.

War Visit Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Defence Secretary Clark M. Clifford announced today he will fly to South Vietnam to assess the war situation, including an anticipated Communist offensive this month or next.

Casualties Down

SAIGON (AP)—Despite massive search operations and record air raids around Saigon, U.S. forces and their allies in the Vietnam war killed fewer Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops last week than they had for a similar period in the last 18 months, the U.S. command reported today.

Workers Back Canada Union

GOLD RIVER (CP) — The Pulp and Paper Workers Union of Canada Wednesday won a representation vote over a rival pulp union at the Tahsis Co. mill near this Vancouver Island community.

The Canadian union polled 175 of the 279 votes cast, while the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers Union received 101.

The Canadian union already holds certifcation for the plant, but a vote was called for by the international union after signing up some members there.

Students Released

Britain Pulling Out From Singapore Base

LONDON (AP) — Britain announced today it will hand over the major part of its naval base at Singapore to the island nation by the end of the year. Britain will keep the part of the base area where naval stores and administrative buildings are located.

A new white paper on defence policy, following an announcement in January of a plan to close gradually bases east of Suez by 1971, said redeployment would make Britain one of the most powerful military forces in Europe.

The Labor government also reiterated it will reinforce its garrison in Hong Kong, the crown colony on China's doorstep.

The white paper said 130 acres of the Singapore base, complete with dockyards, drydocks and other repair and storage installations will be released so the Singapore government can begin converting the facilities for commercial use.

This was the first announcement that Singapore would use the facilities commercially.

The transfer of the base this year is part of a program to help ease the adverse economic impact of the extensive reduction of British military forces east of Suez by 1971.

The British earlier this year announced they were assigning to NATO one entire division, a parachute brigade and a special air service regiment. These home-based units can be called upon by NATO for service in emergency. They are supported by RAF squadrons and a naval force.

The white paper listed the following new British contributions to NATO:

—From 1969 a squadron of Shackleton long-range maritime-reconnaissance aircraft will be transferred to Malta.

—From 1970 a guided missile destroyer will be added to Britain's frigate force in the Mediterranean. A commando ship will also be stationed there.

—From 1970 Rapier air defence units of the RAF will be switched to NATO. From 1971 Phantom-strike-planes bought from the United States will be at the disposal of the alliance.

The white paper stressed Britain's resolve to preserve its ability to rush to the help of any colony or Commonwealth partner any place in the world in case of military need.

U.S. CONGRESS GIVEN TRUDEAU 'HATE' TALES

WASHINGTON (AP)—Accusations about Prime Minister Trudeau's past, similar to those denounced as hate literature by all political parties during the Canadian election campaign, have been entered into the congressional record.

Representative John R. Rarick of Louisiana, saying Trudeau's election has "caused many Americans to inquire into his background," filed an article by the Canadian Intelligence Service of Flesherton, Ont., as published in the South African Observer. Also entered was a recent broadcast by Rev. S. J. Lyons, later reproduced in a number of publications.

Rarick, a right-wing Southern Democrat, said in introducing this "interesting background documentation" that the Trudeau victory led many Americans to "ponder what can be expected from the new leadership of our neighbor to the north."

TORRENTIAL RAINSTORM

6 Lost in U.K. Floods

LONDON (AP) — Torrential rain caused sudden floods through western and central England today. Six persons were dead or missing.

More rain than normally falls in a month fell in a day, swelling rivers over their banks and sending up to six feet of water through low-lying towns. Officials said the storms were the worst in memory.

At least 39 major roads were closed. Trains to Bristol, Liverpool, Manchester and Birmingham were cancelled. The West Country was virtually cut off from the rest of England.

The pounding rain eased to a drizzle at dawn in most places, and the sun broke through in parts of the West Country, but more rain was predicted for later.

London escaped major flooding, but scores of motorists abandoned flooded cars Wednesday night and basements in some parts of the city were awash.

The worst hit areas were Devon and the Cornish Aiviera resorts regions in the southwest, crowded with stranded vacationers.

CBC CONSOLATION PRIZE FOR OAK BAY

By DON VIPOND

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation announced today an expense-paid trip to Singapore for the four boys from Oak Bay high school who last week emerged national champions on the Reach for the Top television quiz show.

Robert W. McGall, provincial director for the CBC, said in Vancouver that arrangements for the winning team's prize had been underway for several weeks but were not completed in time to be announced when the final rounds were taped last week.

The Oak Bay team will be offered the trip, probably this fall, although time and duration have not been decided. The prize will be sponsored by the CBC with the assistance of the youth travel and exchange program of the Department of the Secretary of State in Ottawa.

The student team of Chris Odgers, Bruce Izard, Robert McDougall and Jim Dempsey beat nine other teams on their way first to the provincial and then the national championship.

A furore developed over the weekend with word that the champs would not be included in a similar Canada-U.K. competition next month.

Initially the CBC said travel costs would be too high and this brought subsidy offers from Premier Bennett and Canadian Pacific Airlines.

The network then explained plans for the pilot project were too far advanced. It said finalists had been told earlier that the international competition had no connection with the Reach for the Top series.

Reg Jessop, CBC information officer in Vancouver, said today he did not know whether the prize being offered Oak Bay included team coach Glen Atkinson and spare team member John Duder.

Mr. McGall announced the Oak Bay team's visit to Singapore will be filmed for later viewing on television.

While in Singapore the CBC will hold discussions with Singapore broadcasting and education officials with a view to organizing an exchange of school teams to compete in an international student quiz series.

Spock Fights On; Says War Illegal

EXCITEMENT causes baby Andrea Chipman to cry when his father Dr. Abram Chipman and Dr. Benjamin Spock leave Federal Court in Boston after being sentenced to two years in prison and fined $5,000 on conspiracy charges. Unable to grapple with the situation, Dr. Chipman turned the child over to the noted pediatrician with mixed results. (AP Wirephoto.)

BOSTON (CP) — Peace movement leaders plan a new surge of protests against the war in Vietnam following the sentencing Wednesday of Dr. Benjamin Spock and three other prominent opponents of the war.

The peace movement, which has been more or less in cold storage since preliminary U.S.-North Vietnamese talks began in Paris in May, was rocked back into life by the sentences.

Spock said he will continue his active opposition to the Vietnam war despite a two-year prison sentence and a $5,000 fine for anti-draft activties.

"I'm stil not convinced I broke any law," Spock said after sentencing in U.S. district court. "There's not a shred of legality in the Vietnam war."

The 65-year-old pediatrician was convicted with his co-defendants June 14 on charges of conspiring to counsel, aid and abet young men to evade the draft.

Judge Francis J. W. Ford also imposed two-year prison sentences on Yale University Chaplain William Sloane Coffin Jr., 43; author Mitchell Goodman, 44, of Temple, Maine, and Harvard graduate student Michael Ferber, 23.

Coffin and Goodman were fined $5,000 and Ferber was fined $1,000.

APPEALS PLANNED

The maximum sentence was five years in prison and $10,000 fines.

At a news conference after the sentencing, Spock repeated his contention that the Vietnam war is illegal, an argument that Judge Ford rejected as a defence at the trial.

"I say to the American people wake up!" the pediatrician said. "This war could be stopped if millions of Americans stood up and shouted: 'Let's stop this war!'"

There were demonstrations outside the Boston court where the four were sentenced and in Philadelphia draft opponents put gags on statues of 12 historical figures.

There were other demonstrations in New York, Toronto and Vancouver. American draft dodgers picketed the U.S. consulate in Toronto.

In New York, a spokesman for the National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam sad, "We have been quiet for a while but now we are going to come crashing back into action again."

SENTENCES PROTESTED

Legal Fight May Outlast Conflict

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—Dr. Benjamin Spock, best-selling pacifer to two generations of young mothers, participated in his first peace demonstration on Easter 1962, feeling "acutely self-conscious and ridiculous."

Wednesday in a Boston court, the internationally-known baby specialist was sentenced to two years in jail and a $5,000 fine.

His crime: Conspiring with three colleagues, the U.S. government says, to counsel, aid and abet youths of the so-called Spock generation to refuse to serve in the Vietnam war.

The legal fight seems far from over. Appeals have been promised and could go to the U.S. Supreme Court, a long process. Indeed, the war could be settled before Spock's opposition to it has been ruled on by the courts.

Meanwhile, the gaunt New Englander, 65 years old, six feet, four inches tall, white-haired and a grandfather, has become a symbol—pro and con—of the ferment that has accompanied the war and a lot of other current aspects in American life too involving dissent.

NOT A PACIFIST

No pacifist, Spock served in the Second World War as a naval psychiatrist and supported the United Nations role in Korea against the Communists.

But not Vietnam.

"There's not a shred of legality in the Vietnam war," he insisted angrily Wednesday in Boston after sentencing. "I say wake up. Get out there and do something before it is too late."

Spock completed his celebrated book Baby and Child Care in 1946 and—mostly in paperback—it has sold more than 20,000,000 copies, outselling every other book in the U.S. except the Bible and Shakespeare.

It surpasses such giants as Peyton Place, Gone With the Wind, How to Win Friends and Influence People, Lady Chatterly's Lover and assorted cook books.

"What does Spock say?" became a byword among young matrons harassed by tantrums, tummy upsets or tedious nonprogress in the infant realm of toilet trainng.

STARTED WITH SANE

His first peace demonstrations were with SANE, which pursues nuclear disarmament. That broadened to Vietnam, on grounds the war was 'insane,' that President Johnson had "betrayed the country by broadening the war after electioneering in 1964 on a platform of caution.

But Spock critics, and they exist in some numbers, say he bears a heavy responsibility for the whole shape of modern American youth.

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, himself an American author and byword of sorts, saddled Spock with the heresy of "permissive" child-rearing that had created the "most undisciplined age in history."

Peale said in a recent sermon that two generations had been fed the principles of "feed 'em what ever they want, don't let them cry, instant gratification of needs."

"Two generations of parents who abandoned the old American home quality of discipline have caused our universities to inherit neurosis, neglect, permissiveness, creating a student generation that thinks it can get what it yells for, even student power or the control of universities themselves," Peale said.

Spock pleads not guilty.

REVISES SOME VIEWS

He freely admits he has revised some of his early views to some degrees and suggests in a last edition of Baby and Child Care that parents get tougher—"show more cheerful conviction," as he puts it—about toilet training disciplines.

Youths Burn Draft Cards

One of the youths stuffed the ashes of his draft card under the consulate door; but the other, Cody Wood, 20, said he intends to mail the ashes of his card to his draft board in Westwood, a suburb of Los Angeles.

He said the burning was a "symbolic gesture" in support of Dr. Spock and the U.S. anti-draft movement. The youths are safe from prosecution for draft evasion while in Canada.

2 Dead, 100 Injured

PFORZHEIM (Reuters)—Two persons were killed and at least 100 were injured Wednesday night in a sudden thunder storm which caused widespread damage near this West German town. The village of Wurmberg reported 114 houses damaged, 50 of them badly.

PROTESTORS to the two-year prison term given Dr. Benjamin Spock in connection with his anti-Vietnam war campaign, were rounded up by Toronto police in the Yorkville area Wednesday night. Among those taken to the police station was June Callwood well known magazine writer, who literally begged the police to pick her up. (CP Wirephoto.)

Writer Gets Paddy Wagon Ride to Jail

TORONTO (CP) — Magazine writer June Callwood was arrested Wednesday night following a sit-in to protest the two-year sentence given Dr. Benjamin Spock in Boston on anti-draft charges.

Miss Callwood, 44, was charged with obstructing police after a police van took her and two others away from the Yorkville Avenue area where 10 protesters had sat down in the middle of the road.

At least 10 others were arrested during a 45-minute disturbance in which trash cans on sidewalks were set ablaze and police officers were abused and pelted with soft-drink cans and cups.

The incident began when four protesters sat down in the street, bringing traffic to a halt. When police moved in three of the four left. Police carried the other to the side of the road, to be met by shouted insults.

JOINED MOB

Miss Callwood, vice-president of the Toronto Civil Liberties Union, joined a mob which surged behind police repeatedly asking why the youth was being arrested.

"Why don't you arrest me too?" she asked. An officer said he might. "Oh, goody," she said. "This will be my first bust."

She followed police as they cleared crowds of young people from the sidewalks, repeatedly asking to be arrested.

"They can bust the kids in the face, but they can't bust my face," she said before police arrested a well-dressed young man to whom she had been talking and who refused to move along when asked.

A white patrol wagon then stopped beside the crowd that had gathered around her and she was placed inside with another woman and a man.

Yorkville clergymen, social workers and psychologists moved into the area when the trouble began, insisting that it was not caused by Yorkville hippies but by outsiders who earlier had demonstrated in front of the U.S. consulate on University Avenue.

Soviet Tactics Change Despite Cairo Balloons

By ROBERT H. ESTABROOK
The Washington Post

UNITED NATIONS — Diplomats here are pondering why Egypt has floated three separate trial balloons within the past week relating to possible aspects of a Middle East peace settlement.

First, Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad said in Copenhagen that "We accept the realities, and one of the realities is Israel." Riad made this remark after conferring with United Nations mediator Gunnar Jarring in Stockholm, and added that the Arabs had been mistaken in making propaganda demands for the annihilation of Israel.

Next came a statement by a spokesman in Cairo that Egypt would be willing to have a UN force return to the area. Then there were diplomatic hints, also from Cairo, that Egypt might permit the passage of Israeli cargoes through the Suez Canal in return for a pullback of Israeli troops.

These efforts preceded and coincided with the visit of President Nasser to Moscow and the unexplained prolongation of his stay. A few days previously Jarring also had conferred with high Soviet officials.

Israeli sources are profoundly skeptical about what they regard as inadequate substitutes for peace negotiations which the Arabs still refuse. Each time Cairo has made a conciliatory statement, they say, it has subsequently been repudiated.

While Israel would help to reopen the canal on a basis that would guarantee rights to Israeli ships rather than mere cargoes, these sources add, it is not ready to withdraw troops except after a peace treaty.

But there may be some new elements in the current hints from Cairo. The Egyptians indicate willingness to talk about financial compensation of the Arab refugees rather than their physical return, and they have intimated that they might not insist on regaining control of the Gaza strip.

All this has brought speculation here that the timing of the Egyptian moves may be occasioned both by Jarring's efforts in Europe and by separate Soviet and British pressures to re-open the Suez Canal.

WHY I'M RUNNING
PETER POLLEN

Now that the N.D.P. Provincial Executive has nominated a candidate in Oak Bay, the Liberal candidate cites this as proof that his party is in no socialist alliance. Yet it was the local Oak Bay N.D.P. Association that decided not to run a candidate. When reaching this local decision, they undoubtedly spoke for their members in Oak Bay. The local N.D.P. Chairman, Mr. Peter Bunn, was perfectly forthright, perhaps he was too honest for the professional N.D.P. and Liberal politicians. He said that the N.D.P. should support the Liberal candidate in Oak Bay. This galvanized Mr. Strachan into action and he found a brave lady to carry the N.D.P. banner in Oak Bay in an attempt to show that there was no coalition on the left. The Oak Bay residents are not fooled by all this. They know that the local N.D.P. membership are supporting the Liberals. What these two parties do have in common is their constant opposition to this free enterprise government. On 43 votes in the last legislative session the Liberals and N.D.P. voted together against the government. Bill 33 establishing the Mediation Commission was one such vote. The Liberals continue to be opposed to responsible legislation in the labour relations field. My Liberal opponent says that he generally supports the Bill but he is opposed to one detail of it. The principle in the Bill that he opposes is the fundamental basis of the whole measure, namely, that the Cabinet is permitted to refer a serious strike or lockout to the new Mediation Commission for a binding settlement. Both the N.D.P. and the Liberals are opposed to the most constructive legislative measure in Canada to maintain labour peace and build a strong economy.

Listen: Saturday, July 13, 9:05 to 10:00 p.m. — 1220 Radio — Rebroadcast of Premier Bennett's speech.

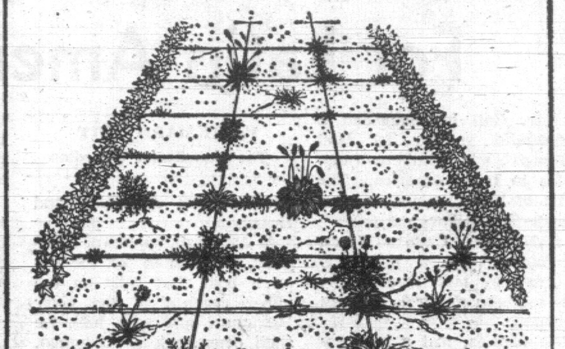
Patio or Driveway weeds?



FIGHT BACK WITH ORTHO!

Without bending . . . without stooping . . . without digging, you can get rid of every single weed that's marring your patio, your driveways, your walks, curbs or gutters. All you do is dilute and sprinkle TRIOX. It's as simple as that.

TRIOX does more than just wipe out established weeds. It prevents new growth for as long as two full years. Seeds wither and die before they can get started again, so you can forget about the work of old-fashioned weeding for a long, long time.

A word of caution. Since TRIOX application kills all vegetation, you don't want to use it on lawns or cultivated areas. For lawn weeds, use ORTHO SUPER WEED-B-GON.

Whatever your weed problem, ORTHO can have it licked this very weekend. See your garden supplier today!

Arthur Mayse

A couple of evenings back, we ran into a small, familiar domestic crisis. No coffee for next morning, and no cream to put in it. So we scurried for a late-closing store on Richmond, and there in a box on the counter, I spotted some friends from long ago.

They were black licorice cigars, each tipped with tiny red candy-beads to simulate a glow. I bought one, along with a couple of caramels for my sweety. Then we headed for home, preoccupied each of us with what we used to know as cent candy.

The one-cent piece and its purchasing power are smaller than they were when we used to buy these unsubtle confections regularly. But the flavors haven't changed, and they turned the drive into a sentimental journey.

You didn't find cent candy in the big downtown stores; at least I don't remember ever buying it there. Perhaps the clerks didn't have time for the long wait, the slow, deliberate selection that such purchases entailed.

But the corner store proprietors did—the people who ran the neighborhood places with bells that jingled when you opened the door, and flypaper spirals dangling from their ceilings.

In retrospect, I am awed by their patience with the child who had one of more of those satisfyingly large coppers to spend.

They made time, as if they realized that here was an important, even solemn transaction.

★

Chocolate teddy-bears ... do you remember them?

They were as long as your forefinger, and the chocolate was a thin coating over a hard, clear-red body that was about as durable as candy can get.

If you hit a chocolate teddybear a fast, treacherous crack on the edge of the pavement, it might shatter. But who wanted to break one? Better to lick it small, then pouch the remainder in a cheek to last half a golden afternoon.

They, like the tiny imitation ice-cream cones with crisp marshmallow topping, the licorice whips and the big round jawbreakers, belong to the lost summers of a simpler world.

They were the sweets of infinite idleness; they went with sun-faded overalls, and running shoes that had lost their round ankle-caps and begun, just a little, to smell.

I tried a jawbreaker a while ago. It was smaller than the ones I have in mind, and at best an inferior shadow of those shiny black globes.

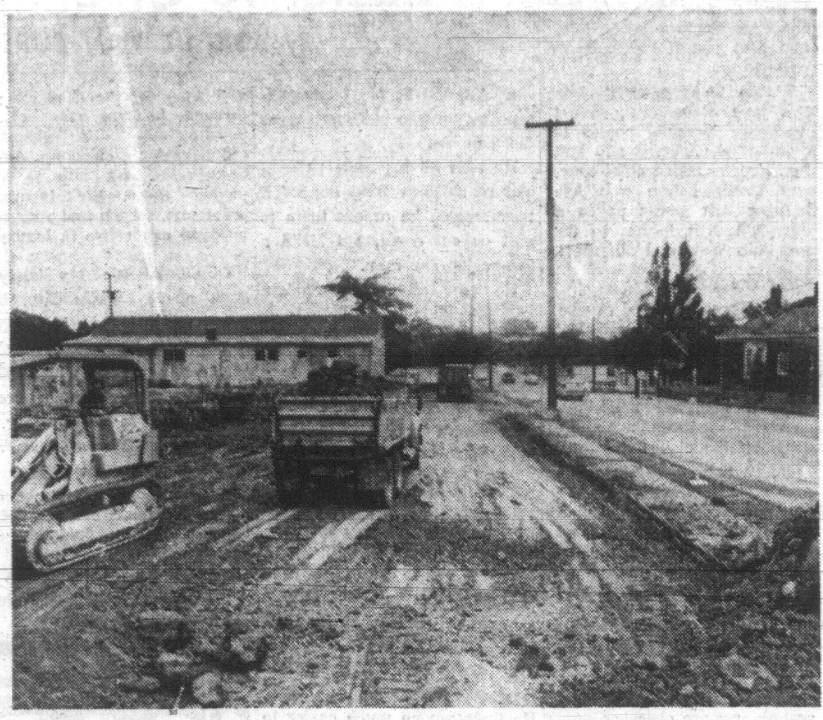
They were built in layers, and no jaw so mighty that it could shatter one. You worked them down, taking your time about it, until only a pea-sized ball remained. Then and only then did you crunch through the caraway seed at the centre.

The thing about cent-candy was that, in most of its forms, it lasted, and its taste lingered. In a moment of mad extravagance, you might choose a couple of toasted marshmallows or a thin rectangle of chocolate, but better to get a licorice plug with a metal badge pronged into its leathery front, or a strip of paper with sugary enchantments stuck down its generous length.

Or maybe a stick of Pickaninny gum (and who today would so label a product?). Juvenile theory held that it was made of reclaimed bike tubes sparingly flavored; but if you got a black stick you won an entire pack. The black sticks were plentiful; once in that more innocent world, they kept me chewing all through a hot July.

Cent-candy, a misnomer now, still turns up in some of its varieties, but I'd like to find a dim little store that sold them all.

Hey! You remember "chloroform" lozenges, and marrowbones, and sawlogs, licorice whistles, and those yellow squashy peanut-shapes that helped sweeten the world when we were young?



CAREFULLY SKIRTING the Italian Community Hall at Rose and Kings city work crews are pushing ahead with the development of a six-lane highway destined to be one of the city's major traffic arteries. The hall, one of the last properties standing in the way of the road widening program, is scheduled for removal to another site within the next two weeks. The new highway will provide the western boundary for the Rose-Blanshard public housing complex on which construction is expected to start in the fall providing rental homes geared to income.

Stiff Penalties Face Ineligible Oak Bay Voters

Oak Bay returning officer Ken Murphy today warned non-residents of the riding caught voting in the July 15 provincial byelection are subject to stiff penalties even if they are on the voters' list.

He said there is a good chance anyone trying to vote in that manner would get away with it unless one of the polling clerks or scrutineers recognized him as a non-resident.

But he said he was certain that all three parties in the riding are advising ineligible voters to stay away on election day.

Penalties for summary conviction on the offence are a fine of not less than $200 or more than $400 and a jail term not exceeding one year "with or without hard labor."

NOT MOTIFIED

Mr. Murphy said many non-residents are on the voters' list because they did not notify the registrar of voters when they left the ridng.

Enumerators have the authority to add names to the list when they find a new resident at an address but cannot remove the old names because the people may still be living elsewhere in the riding, he said.

Every dwelling in the riding is supposed to be visited prior to the election, he said, and many people who complain they were not enumerated simply weren't home on the several occasions the enumerator called, he said.

For new residents of the riding this would mean exclusion from the list but voters already on would stay on.

The returning officer pointed out that qualifications for voting include residence in the riding on election day.

Anyone enumerated and included on the list who then moved from the riding is not entitled to vote and is subject to the same tough penalties if caught doing so.

In a general election such person could vote in his former riding so long as he didn't vote in his new one as well.

Mr. Murphy said persons whose voting status is questioned by scutineers have the right to swear an oath that they are residents of the riding but would then also be liable for perjury charges if proved to be lying.

SIGN POLL BOOK

Voters' lists are corrected through signing of poll books by persons when they vote, and by watching death notices, but the system isn't infallible, Mr. Murphy said.

The basic responsibilty to get on — and off — voters' lists belongs to the voter, he said.

Other qualifcations for voting, besides residence in Oak Bay on July 15, are that voters must be at least 19 years of age, Canadian citziens, residents of Canada for 12 months and be in the province for six months.

88 Rabbits Left to Die In Cages

A story of 88 starving, thirsty rabbits, some dead in cages filled with manure, was brought out in court today in the case of a man charged with wilfully failing to provide for animals.

David Hanns, 7101 Puckle Road in Saanichton, was found guilty and fined $100. He was also fined $50 each on three charges of obtaining goods by false pretences.

Four Crown witnesses, including two SPCA inspectors, recalled in vivid language a visit they paid to the residence of the accused April 5.

HOUSE ABANDONED

Court was told the house was obviously abandoned and the rabbits left without food and water. When food and water were given to them they fought with each other to get it, the witnesses said.

Many of the dead rabbits were babies and most of the live animals weighed only half as much as they should one witness said.

In imposing sentence Magistrate William Ostler said he took a worse view of the animal neglect than he did of the charges for false pretences.

"Anyone with any humane feelings cannot help but be revolted by what happened," he said.

The accused escaped jail sentence as the magistrate said he was considering the public good. Court was told Hanns has a wife and child and a job waiting for him in Alberta.

Quebecers Coming Here On Exchange

Ten Victoria students will bring exchange partners from Quebec with them when they return from visiting that province July 20.

The 13th annual exchange organized by the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews has over 1,000 English-speaking high school students from 90 communities in nine provinces now visiting Quebec. It is the largest program yet.

On Monday more than 2,000 of them will begin return visits to other parts of Canada.

Taking part in the program from Victoria are Denise Mooney, Leah Rose, Jim Main, Nancy Campbell, Linda Baker, Brian Siddall, Patricia Hughes, Sherry Dumka, Jennifer Campbell and Fred Hughes.

In Quebec a number of organizations have provided recreation and special events, including the St. Jean Baptiste Society. A $20,000 grant from the citizenship branch of the Secretary of State has aided the program.

The Quebecers will visit homes where English is spoken but where the families represent a diversity of ethnic origins including German, Ukrainian, Polish, Latvians, Swedes as well as families who are Jewish, Negro and Indian.

BENEVOLENT BEINGS OVERHEAD

By PAUL MUSGROVE

They're not flying saucers. They're starcraft. . . .

. . . They're friendly, and they see great changes coming on Earth.

This was the message in a delightful hodgepodge of galactic claims delivered at the Tally Ho Wednesday night by Mrs. Marianne Francis, "director and channel" of the Solar Light Centre in Southern Oregon.

A "channel," said Mrs. Francis, is a person in telepathic contact with the starmen.

The Solar Light Centre—publishing a quarterly magazine called "Starcraft"—is a kind of cosmic public relations organization attempting to bring mankind an awareness of the benevolent beings overhead.

During her talk, in which she addressed more than 100 Victorians, Mrs. Francis called earth "an isolationist in the system of planets."

'TEEM WITH LIFE'

She said planets "teem with life and interplanetary travel."

Spacemen from many areas inside and outside our solar system communicate with chosen earthlings via telepathy, physical means and a "tensor beam"—a device enabling the starman to speak, using a human's voice.

Mrs. Francis said she has been a channel for more than 10 years and knows several starmen well, although she has never met them physically.

At that point she answered her silent critics by saying:

"I know I do not imagine this. Much of my material has checked out with other channels."

MARIANNE FRANCIS

The most important thing, claimed Mrs. Francis, is not to question the means of transportation used by the star people but to listen to what they have to tell us.

'AT CROSSROADS'

The starmen have a fourfold warning for Earthlings;

- ● We are at a crossroads: peace and prosperity and interplanetary travel on one side, a nuclear holocaust on the other;
- ● Earth is moving into a region of "higher frequency vibrations" which will bring about changes in life as we know it;
- ● Geological changes in store include the rising and sinking of great masses of land, including the uplifting of ancient Lemuria, a continent supposedly lost beneath the sea ages ago; and
- ● Changes are coming in Earth people's consciousness.

Mrs. Francis said starmen will play a part in the great change.

If earth embarks on a nuclear war, the starmen will come and evacuate the "children of light" leaving destructive people to go their own way. During the change in consciousness, "believers" will go into the "golden age" while destructives will bring on the destruction of their own bodies.

STARMAN 'TALKS'

On behalf of the "Solar and Galactic Tribunals" Monca charged Earth capitalists and governments with suppressing knowledge of the space people for their own gain.

To that end she said your governments have several starcraft in their possession and are currently engaged in making dummies to fool the people of earth because knowledge of the free and limitless power available would cause a collapse in the monetary system.

There was a final word of caution . . .

Mrs. Francis said there is a race of beings "beyond the Constellation Orion" who are outside the controls of the Galactic councils and are not friendly.

Earthmen, beware.

Teen Suicide Rate Alarms Health Chief

Maui Racers Converging On Winds

The 2,300-mile Victoria to Maui, Hawaii, yacht race now hinges on which of the 14 boats reaches the trade winds first.

By Wednesday night all nine boats in the westerly group had turned south in an effort to work their way around the southern edge of the North Pacific high-pressure area.

Meanwhile, the southern group which had been sailing parallel to the coast, now is headed on a direct course for Hawaii and is quite close to the prevailing trade winds.

The groups are converging on each other and are expected to meet within the next day or so.

VELARIS HOLDS LEAD

Still in the lead is the Vancouver sloop Velaris sailed by Col Killam followed by his brother Bill in Porpoise III. Leading the southern group is Moonglow III skippered by Don Neilsen of Tacoma, Wash.

Velaris has now sailed 1,180 miles on a direct course and has 1,220 to go while Moonglow II has sailed 1,210 miles and has 1,240 to complete the course.

Suerte made Wednesday's best run, sailing 190 miles.

Reports received from the Laymore, the Esquimalt based naval auxiliary vessel escorting the fleet, indicate the first yacht should complete the course some time after noon July 17. This is based on an assumed run of 175 miles a day.

Courts Asked To Enforce Board Order

Men Not Rehired By Garbage Firm

The Supreme Court of British Columbia has been asked to settle a dispute between a private garbage collector in Saanich and the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Nearly two weeks ago, Loren MacNutt was ordered by the B.C. Labor Relations Board to reinstate seven employees who were illegally dismissed.

He was also ordered to "cease using coercion or intimidation of any kind that could reasonably have the effect of compelling or inducing any person to refrain from becoming or continuing to be a member of a trade union."

SEVEN FIRED

The board said it was satisfied that Mr. MacNutt, who handles garbage collection in Saanich under an agreement with the municipality, unlawfully refused to continue to employ and subsequently discharged seven employees who proposed to become union members.

A spokesman for the union said this morning that the 14-day deadline to comply with the Labor Relations Board order expired Wednesday.

"We have already filed our request with the registrar for the LRB requesting that the next step be taken," the spokesman said. "In other words the original order will now be filed with the registrar of the Supreme Court and is then enforceable as a judgment or order of that court."

BIDS EXPECTED FOR LABORATORY

The Capital Region Hospital District Board will hold a meeting "very soon" to decide whether a proposed $600,000 laboratory expansion at Jubilee Hospital will go to tender.

District Chairman Mayor Hugh Curtis today said he has received a letter from Health Minister Ralph Loffmark saying the government approves of a tender call on condition that the regional district does too.

Although there appears little doubt that a tender call would be approved, the district board will have to schedule a meeting to formally consider the matter.

Mr. Loffmark pointed out however that the government's approval does not commit it to approving a contract itself.

CONSIDER PRICE

He said the cabinet would have to consider the actual contract price before construction could be authorized.

Mayor Curtis said there already is $79,984 on hand for the project, part of the money donated by the Greater Victoria municipalities to help with hospital improvements after ratepayers rejected a hospital tax bylaw.

He said a federal grant of undisclosed size was expected towards the project as well as assistance from B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

OLD FORMULA

Since the project involves an expansion, the board has to determine whether BCHIS would pay 60 per cent of the total cost it gives towards new construction or whether it would only contribute under the old formula of 50 per cent.

Remainder of the cost, after senior government grants, would have to be borne by the district's ratepayers, he said.

Most of the laboratory expansion will involve an additonal fifth floor to the hospital's south wing but considerable plumbing and wiring work may force temporary closing of some facilites in the building during the construction period, expected to stretch over a year.

50 Men at Work Repairing Ship

About 50 Yarrows men are working in two shifts to repair extensive damage to the steering mechanism of the cargo ship World Harmony.

The World Harmony, owned by World Wide Shipping and registered in Hartlepool, England, was leaving Raymond, Oregon, with a load of logs for Japan when she struck a submerged object in the Willapa River turning basin.

Parts for the job were air-freighted to the ship and brought by her to Esquimalt.

The job, expected to take about five days, involves rebuilding the steering mechanism and straightening the rudder stock.

Growing Pressures, Drug Use Blamed

By JIM HUME

He was 19 years old, good looking, a brilliant student and apparently happy and well adjusted.

He tried to hang himself.

Today he lives in the twilight zone, his brain irrevocably damaged when the rope around his neck cut off essential supplies of blood and oxygen.

He is only one of an unknown number of British Columbia teen-agers who last year attempted to find the final solution to their growing problems in death by their own hand.

In Greater Victoria alone 31 youngsters between the ages of 15 and 19 years tried the suicide route with poisons ranging from overdoses of pain killing tablets to deep drinks of petroleum products.

"These are just the teen-age suicide attempts by poison," says Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer for the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health "They do not reflect a true picture because it is virtually impossible to maintain accurate records of all suicide attempts."

Rarely Report Cases to Police

Attempted sucide is an indictable offence under Canadian law but, as one local physician quite freely admits, doctors rarely report their cases to the police.

"It is true that most courts simply impose a suspended sentence, but even so I feel that any patient of mine who has been forced to make an attack on the sanctity of his own life needs counselling help, not an appearance in a public courtroom, however lenient and understanding that court may be."

"If all cases were reported, goodness knows how many there would be," says Dr. Whitbread.

A few weeks ago one Victoria doctor handled three teen-age suicide attempts in a five-day period. University exams were on, high school exams looming close.

"The pressure on the youngsters get fiercer every year," says Dr. Whitbread in partial explanation for the more than 100 per cent increase in teen-age suicide attempts in 1967.

"They are pushed by their parents, pushed by the schools, pushed by society. They are told, over and over again that unless they get a university degree they are some kind of failure.

"So they fail their entrance exams or, and this is possibly worse, they escape through and find that in university the pressure has increased.

'Almost Intolerable Pressures'

"I feel pretty sure that if only the people who should be at university were there, the campus population would be reduced by one third. Instead we have a good portion of our university students, who should really be in some other form of endeavor, living under almost intolerable pressures."

But Dr. Whitbread does not think that "pressure" is the only cause for the sharp upswing of teen-age suicide bids in 1967.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the extensive use of marijuana and LSD during 1967 is one of the prime reasons for the upswing," Dr. Whitbread said.

"It is all very well to try and argue that these drugs don't really do any harm, but anything that takes a person up to such a high peak is bound to subsequently drop him into deep depression.

"And I don't think anyone can argue against the fact that marijuana and LSD defintely disturb the powers of discernment and leave judgment blurred.

"Under those conditons it should not be really surprising that the attempted suicide rate is on the increase."

In British Columbia last year 67 people took their own lives. In Greater Victoria eight, seven females, one male, found their death wish.

The experts say those figures must be tripled or quadrupled for the attempted suicides. That multiplication appears extremely conservative if the Greater Victoria figures are used as an average base.

For the eight successful suicide bids in this area there were 119 unsuccessful attempts via poison. Once again, the experts warn, this is not the full nor true picture.

Many 'Not Really Serious'

Of the cases handled by the Poison Control Centre 31 were teen-agers, 47 between 20 and 39 years (with half of those barely out of their teens) and 41 over the age of 40.

"To be objective it should be stated that many of these attempts are not really serious attempts to take life," says Dr. Whitbread. "A good number of them are just dramatic attempts to attract attention. But even so, the cause for concern remains great.

"And the damage done, whether in a serious suicide attempt or in a move to demand attention, is alarming."

What happens when a massive overdose of a pain killing drug is taken but speedy medical attention saves the life involved?

Tomorrow the Times will discuss the frightening aftermath of the suicide attempts that fail. None of the cases will be from the Victoria area, but all will be from official case histories recorded in Western Canada.

They will tell a sad story of young people who sought the long dark but found instead the grey half-light brought by permanent damage to the brain, the lungs, the kidneys and the bright spirit of youth.

Seriously Injured

A woman who received multiple injuries in a car accident shortly after noon today was only in fair condition at press time.

Rose Voor-Twordik, 512 Ridley, was involved in an accident which took place in Saanich.

Ask The Times

Q. What is the largest religious building ever built?—S.J.G.

A. The largest religious building ever constructed was the Angkor Wat—City Temple—in Cambodia, southeast Asia. It was built in the period 1113-1150 to the god Vishnu. Its curtain wall measures 1,400 by 1,400 yards and its population was at times 80,000 persons before it was abandoned in 1432.

Q. Are Canadians the world's heaviest beer drinkers?—L.P.

A. No. Of reporting countries the nation with the highest beer consumption per person is West Germany with 26.8 gallons in 1964. In the northern territories of Australia the annual per capita intake has been estimated as high as 52 gallons. A society for the prevention of alcoholism in Darwin, Australia, had to disband in 1966 for lack of support.
